CHAIRMAN CASTRO: I'm calling the meeting to order. I'm Marty Castro, Chair of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. And I want to welcome everyone this morning to our briefing on racial disparities and the stand your ground laws.

It is currently 9:06 a.m. on October 17, 2014. I am joined today by Commissioners Achtenberg, Commissioner Narasaki, Commissioner Timmons-Goodson, Commissioner Yaki, and Commission Heriot. Commissioner Kladney and Commissioner Kirsanow will join us by phone.

The purpose of this briefing is to determine whether there is a possible racial bias in the assertion, investigation, or enforcement of justifiable homicide laws in states with stand your ground provisions.

Experts at this briefing will present testimony on the personal impact of the laws, findings from their research, especially those research pieces regarding the racial dimensions of justifiable homicides and elaborate upon actions that are being taken by advocacy groups to alleviate concerns related to stand your ground laws.

2 Now stand your ground laws, some of us
3 are part of a larger issue. We see what happened 4 here in Florida. Other states obviously have 5 similar situations. We see what's happened in 6 Ferguson. Names like Trayvon Martin, Jordan
7 Davis, these are now part of the national fabric 8 of conversation about race and the impact about 9 race.

10 Whether laws are biased, implicitly 11 biased, explicitly biased. Those sorts of 12 questions must be answered not by anecdote, or 13 example, but by concrete research.

14 And it is our hope that the work that 15 the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights is doing on 16 this topic will present concrete statistical 17 information, much of which is lacking in this area 18 right now. To allow us to critically look at the 19 true impact of these laws.

20 Today we're going to hear from folks 21 from different perspectives and different points 22 of view. Our job here at the U.S. Commission on 23 Civil Rights is to shine our historic light on 24 these issues and separate the wheat from the chaff 25 of what is being said and what is being produced

2 on these topics, and present to the President and 3 Congress and the people of the United States our 4 opinion based on over 50 years of advocacy and 5 being a watchdog on civil rights as to what we 6 believe to be the impact of these laws on minority 7 individuals and minority communities.

8 I want to thank Commissioner Yaki for 9 his opportunity to bring this forward to us. I 10 will ask him to make a very brief statement and 11 then I will introduce the members of the panel and 12 we'll begin our briefing.

13 Commissioner Yaki.

14 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Thank you very much,
15 Mr. Chair, and thank everyone who is here today.

16 I called for this investigation. And 17 today while it's just a briefing it's part of a 18 broader -- broader discussion and broader analysis 19 by the commission.

20 This investigation is by -- today will 21 help the investigation. It is by no means an end, 22 but just a beginning of the analysis that will be 23 conducted by our staff. I did so because a year 24 and a half -- about two years ago I actually 25 started calling for this investigation, and it

2 wasn't until last year that the commission had the 3 resources and the personnel in order to start this 4 -- down this path.

5 I did so because I'm troubled by stand 6 your ground laws. I'm troubled by the fact that 7 we have to have discussions about the deaths of 8 African American men like Trayvon Martin and 9 Jordan Davis. I'm troubled by conclusions and 10 statistics showing racial disparity in the 11 research of people like John Roman.

12 I'm troubled by the expansion of a 13 common law doctrine that now allows people not 14 only to defend themselves in their home, but 15 converts it into a "shoot first" anywhere policy.
16 And I'm troubled by the fact that despite its 17 claims homicides seem to increase rather than 18 decrease in states with stand your ground laws.

19 And I'm especially, as a member of the 20 U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, deeply troubled 21 by the fact that here we are in the 21st century 22 and we are here to try to understand and study the 23 implications, extent, and effect of bias, 24 unconscious, implicit bias and its impact on laws 25 like stand your ground. I hope today and in the 2 days ahead that we will get evidence and hear data 3 and collect information that can help policy 4 makers, lawyers, judges, and others understand 5 better these laws and their impact on our society.

6 And I want to thank again everyone here 7 today. And I want to extend a special thanks to 8 our staff director, Marlene Sallo, for working so 9 diligently and hard on this matter with me. And, 10 again, I appreciate everything that she's done.

11 Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

12 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
13 Commissioner Yaki.

14 So now on to some housekeeping matters.
15 So today's briefing is going to consist of a 16 number of panels. Our first is going to be made 17 up of -- all total of 16 distinguished speakers.
18 The first panel is going to consist of legislators 19 and advocates.

20 Panel two will consist of statistics
21 behind the stand your ground laws. And a guest 22 advocate speaker that will give us a real life 23 perspective on the consequences of the 24 implementation of stand your ground laws.

25 And ultimately panel three, with

2 scholars giving us their perspective on this 3 important topic.

4 Now during the briefing each panelist 5 will have eight minutes to speak. After all of 6 the panelists have made their presentations 7 commissioners will then have an opportunity to ask 8 questions of them. There will be an allotted time 9 period for that to occur.

10 As I have in the past I will fairly 11 recognize commissioners who wish to speak. Those 12 commissions who were unable to get here that are 13 on the phone, you'll have to designate -- shout 14 out your name and let me know that you want to 15 speak. Otherwise, the commissioners present just 16 raise your hand and I will keep a list of who will 17 be next.

18 So we also want everyone to adhere 19 strictly to their time allotments so that we all 20 have an opportunity to engage in the conversation 21 on this important topic.

22 You panelists will notice there's a 23 series of warning lights that have been set up.
24 When the light turns from green to yellow that 25 means you've got two minutes remaining. When the 2 light turns red I ask you to wrap up your 3 statements. And just be mindful of other 4 panelists' times so we don't take away from 5 anyone. I certainly don't want to cutoff anyone 6 mid-sentence.

7 Again, I ask my fellow commissioners to 8 be considerate of the panelists and one another 9 and try to keep our questions and comments 10 concise. I know there will be followups and I 11 will allow that to a point, but we want to have 12 everyone have the opportunity to ask questions.

13 Once we do all this I think that we will 14 have the data that we need. So what I'd like to 15 do is first proceed with the panel that is before 16 us now, our first panel. I will introduce you to 17 the panelists and I will swear you in.

18 Our first panelist this morning is 19 Chris Smith, Florida State Senator representing 20 the 31st State Senate District.

21 Our second panelist is Todd Rutherford, 22 Minority Leader for the South Carolina State 23 House. Representing South Carolina's 71st House 24 District.

25 And let's see. Our third panelist is

Ahmad Nabil Abuznaid a Legal and Policy Director for Dream Defenders.

And for the first panel we were to have Lucia McBath, the mother of Jordan Davis.

Unfortunately, she won't be able to join us today.

7

She sends her sincere apologies and asks that her

8 previously submitted statement be accepted for the 9 record in lieu of her testimony, which we will do.

10

So I will now ask the panelists to swear

and affirm that the information that you're about 13 to provide us as true -- is true and accurate to 14 the best of your knowledge and belief. Is that correct?

SENATOR CHRIS SMITH: Yes.

16

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes.

17

18

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you.

19

Senator Smith, please proceed.

20

SENATOR CHRIS SMITH: Thank you. And I want to first welcome you to the sunshine state of 22

21

Florida. I appreciate you coming down here and 23 having this very important grownup discussion

24 about stand your ground. And I especially as a 25 legislator who deals with the budget really appreciate you coming to Florida.

My district is the 31st Senate District which is Broward County, which is Fort Lauderdale, about three hours south of here. Which is home of a lot of good shopping so after this feel free to trek down I-95.

I'll begin my remarks. In 2005 Florida passed the first stand your ground law becoming in the process the national pioneer for all subsequent tragedies and unintended consequences that have followed. We have seen the law used by aggressors as a license to kill by allowing anyone to escalate minor disputes into a deadly incident. Anyone to provoke a confrontation and then seek immunity under stand your ground, an escape hatch of fear of imminent bodily harm or death. While these provocations can occur anywhere at any time, aside from the most notorious cases, namely, the Trayvon Martin case and the Jordan Davis case.

Other less well known cases and incidents have occurred outside of family restaurants, bars, house parties, public parks, and as a result of road rage confrontations.

Within weeks of the national uproar over

2 the killing of Trayvon Martin in 2012 I convened a 3 task force of prosecutors, defense attorneys, law 4 enforcement personnel, and scholars to review the 5 law and make recommendations for legislative 6 changes.

7 My task force issued a report and 8 recommendations in May of 2012. Among the things 9 my task force recommended were education of the 10 public and law enforcement officers on the stand 11 your ground law.

12 Two, creation of a system to track 13 self-defense claims in Florida so we could 14 identify any desperate (phonetic) treatment.

15 Three, allowing police to fully 16 investigate all killings by detaining suspects, 17 even when they claim stand your ground immunity.

18 Four, defining the term "unlawful 19 activity" and clarification of the role of 20 provocation, thus allowing the law exactly when 21 people are aggressors such as -- that they should 22 not -- when people are aggressors they should not 23 be able to hide behind stand your ground after 24 taking a life.

25 The Governor of Florida convened a task

2 force and they also recommended that the 3 legislature examine the term "unlawful activity" 4 as to give guidance to court's on the proper 5 application of the law with the intent to protect 6 innocent persons.

7 The Governor's task force also agreed 8 with my recommendations to educate law enforcement 9 agencies, prosecutors, and judiciary on 10 self-defense laws and to review the standards 11 regulating neighborhood watch associations.

12 Despite the recommendations by my task 13 force and the governor the legislature only looked 14 at two of the recommendations, removal of immunity 15 from injuries and deaths of an innocent third 16 party. And review of 10/20 life, minimum 17 mandatory in a narrow scope of cases involving 18 stand your ground.

19 At this time the state still refuses to 20 compile a comprehensive database of cases.
21 Luckily, the Tampa Bay Times, the Urban Institute, 22 and the American Bar Association and others have, 23 and data shows disturbing disparity involving the 24 impact of this law which remains bewildering to 25 law enforcement, confusing to prosecutors, and 2 misapplied by courts.

3 I noticed on your agenda that you have 4 persons discussing the statistics and so I will 5 not go through those statistics.

6 Just to recap that the overwhelming
7 statistics show that it's the race of the victim 8 which is most dispositive of the outcome of the 9 cases. When the victim is black there are huge 10 statistics showing that you're more likely to 11 proceed with a stand your ground defense.

12 This year I filed a bill, a bipartisan 13 bill, which did four of the things in which I 14 discussed. It clarified the definition of 15 aggressor, and made clear that people who start 16 fights and chase victims down cannot later claim 17 immunity or self-defense under stand your ground.

18 It provided guidance to judges and 19 jury's about the legislative intent of the law.
20 And it placed guidelines on neighborhood watch 21 programs and allowed innocent bystanders to file 22 lawsuits to recover injuries.

23 Even though the bill passed two 24 committees it was later blocked from the Senate 25 floor.

2 Still I provided the legislature with 3 yet another opportunity to right the wrongs of 4 this law. I proposed a simple, common sense 5 amendment to a bill being considered on the floor 6 of the Senate. My amendment would have specified 7 the how, when, and by whom of using the statutes' 8 defense.

9 It would have defined aggressor.
10 Stopped those who start and bring themselves to a 11 deadly fight from hiding behind the law's 12 protections. It would have simply added a 13 bipartisan statement of legislative intent which 14 would finally give notice to the public and 15 guidance to judges and juries about what the 16 legislature meant to achieve with stand your 17 ground statute.

18 My amendment would have clarified that 19 justification and immunity protections in the 20 statute were not meant to show aggressors, 21 vigilantes, and others -- and condoned other acts 22 of revenge. Yet, the Senate rejected these 23 concepts. My amendment was rejected along party 24 line votes with the majority party prevailing.

25 Over and over some legislators have

2 disingenuously said that this -- that that tragic 3 outcome was not the intent when we passed stand 4 your ground. But that is cold comfort to anyone 5 who has lost a family member to a senseless 6 violence inspired in part by perpetrators belief 7 that this law gives them absolute right to take a 8 life and provide them immunity after doing it.

9 Adding insult to injury, when given the 10 opportunity to clarify, clearly outline and 11 statute, what exactly they meant when they passed 12 the statute, some of my colleagues turned their 13 backs on the opportunity, and in doing so turned 14 their backs on many youth who tend to be victims 15 of this egregious abuse of the immunities and 16 defenses contained in the current law.

17 Even the -- notably, the one thing that 18 the legislature did do this session was to expand 19 stand your ground. Cynically invoking the case of 20 Marissa Alexander to justify broadening the flawed 21 law. Purportedly the purpose of the new expanded 22 language was to help protect a person who fires a 23 warning shot in circumstances where they would be 24 free to use stand your ground to injure or kill 25 someone. It provides that such a person cannot be 2 prosecuted.

3 However, the new language goes further 4 and does much more. It allows stand your ground 5 claimants to have their records expunged if their 6 charges are later dropped or they prevail in 7 court. This will make it virtually impossible for 8 the public to effectively track these incidents 9 and thereby use the data to demonstrate desperate 10 (phonetic) impact of the law.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
12 Senator, appreciate your presentation.

13 Representative Rutherford, you can have 14 the floor.

15 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Thank you
16 and good morning. And thank you for inviting me.
17 And I apologize that I seem to have lost my tie in 18 transit, didn't realize it until this morning when 19 I was coming over.

20 And I do want to state first and 21 foremost that while I am one of the legislator's 22 that voted for the stand your ground law in South 23 Carolina and continue to be one of its proponents 24 I am interested in the conversation and the dialog 25 this morning as to whether any changes can be made

2 to make it any better.

3 In South Carolina I do believe that it 4 will remain the law of the land, that it is not 5 going anywhere any time soon. And as a lawyer I 6 have used stand your ground successfully in one 7 case and have another hearing coming up in 8 November. And recently used it this week in 9 another case. And have not seen the data to 10 suggest that there's a disparate impact on African 11 Americans, although I am very interested in 12 Senator Smith's data and how we can look at that 13 and make sure that that is not going on.

14 I will not remain a proponent of a law 15 that clearly has a disparate impact on African 16 Americans, although it has not been shown to me 17 that that is the case currently in South Carolina.

18 The last case that I tried was the State 19 of South Carolina versus Shannon Scott. It deals 20 with one of the instances that Senator Smith 21 brought about. My client was charged with -- when 22 he was at home he received a phone call from his 23 daughter who was being chased home from a 24 nightclub by some female thugs. They chased her 25 all the way to her house. He had his daughter

2 pull in the backyard. When he did the female 3 thugs out front fired a warning shot. They turned 4 around at the end of the street, cut off their 5 headlights and as they were approaching his house, 6 again he requested that they please stop. He 7 fired a shot. And that shot hit a second car that 8 was following the female thugs and killed a 15 9 year old individual in that car.

10 My client was charged with murder for 11 the death of the 15 year old child. It was a 12 senseless tragedy that never should have happened.
13 But one that could have been prevented, (A) by the 14 female thugs never following his daughter home.
15 And (B) by the police arresting the female thugs 16 and charging them with felony murder as would be 17 allowed in South Carolina. No clue why that did 18 not happen and on the stand the police, when 19 confronted with why they did not arrest them said, 20 "I don't know."

21 And so an innocent person shot, clearly 22 the wrong person shot. But my client Shannon 23 Scott simply defending his home, his castle, and 24 his family who were cowering on the floor in the 25 kitchen trying not to get shot.

2 The one this week was an individual who 3 was at home and some people tried to do a home 4 invasion on his house. Beating on his door with a 5 sledgehammer. They beat on it three different 6 times as confirmed by witnesses across the street.
7 He opened the door, did not realize that someone 8 had tried to get in until he saw the marks on the 9 door. He then went to leave his apartment. In 10 doing so he was confronted by an individual with a 11 gun. The other gentleman with the sledgehammer, 12 who he thought had a gun, the individual pointed a 13 gun at him, my client exited his vehicle, fired 14 several shots, one of whom hit the gentleman with 15 the sledgehammer. He was not prosecuted. Is 16 going to do a statement to the police and will 17 receive immunity under the stand your ground law 18 for that case.

19 The next one in November is an 18 year 20 old -- ah, he's a 17 year old child at the time, 21 was at a restaurant, fast food place, after a 22 basketball game. He -- it was a -- because it was 23 a basketball game with rival teams there was -- 24 there were several words being thrown back and 25 forth in the restaurant. My client leaves the 2 restaurant, goes and gets in his vehicle and as he 3 is leaving the restaurant is approached by another 4 kid -- because these are 17 year olds -- who comes 5 up to his window, and the allegation is that the 6 victim in this case, or the person who was 7 stabbed, reached in the window and tried to grab 8 my client. And certainly put him in fear for his 9 life. My client reached out the window with his 10 knife -- the knife that his grandfather had given 11 him -- and he stabbed him one time, cut off the 12 bottom of his heart, and the victim died within 13 the next five minutes.

14 Tragic cases in every single instance.
15 But, cases that in South Carolina would have left 16 an African American male charged with a murder 17 charge that they would probably not be able to 18 defend financially. That would have left them in 19 jail in South Carolina typically for a year, two 20 years before they would have ever gone to trial.
21 And having the ability to use the self-defense 22 case law, South Carolina does not have a 23 self-defense statute prior to stand your ground so 24 you would have had to have relied on case law, 25 which suggests that you must retreat. That you

2 cannot elevate the use of force. Which in most 3 instances is troubling in and of itself, but 4 certainly in these cases, it would have led to the 5 most recent client, the child -- the basketball 6 game, because he used a knife on someone who was 7 unarmed, not able to avail himself of the 8 self-defense law.

9 It has been my opinion since I saw the 10 -- the proposal for stand your ground that the old 11 law, the old case law as it related to 12 self-defense was outdated. That people should not 13 have to live in fear. That you should not have to 14 measure your use of force by that which is being 15 used against you. That it was archaic and that it 16 continues to be.

17 I am troubled by the fact that someone 18 could act as a vigilante. But I do believe that 19 the courts, at least in South Carolina thus far 20 have rooted those cases out. Am troubled by the 21 fact that someone could be a wrongdoer and claim 22 that he was lawfully someplace where he should not 23 have been.

24 That case came up in South Carolina. A 25 gentleman that was in the middle of a home

2 invasion tried to claim that he was forced to do 3 the home invasion. And when he shot the homeowner 4 that he deserved immunity under stand your ground.
5 The judge laughed at it. Sent it up to the 6 Supreme Court and the Supreme Court tossed it out.

7 I am told by a number of lawyers who 8 have not given me permission to use their clients 9 names or their fact scenarios, but that there are 10 several other cases pending in South Carolina with 11 African American defendants who shot white 12 individuals who were the wrongdoers who are 13 seeking to claim stand your ground as an immunity 14 defense, but have not been able to do so because 15 they simply cannot get a hearing. It is -- the 16 evidence that I have seen in South Carolina, the 17 anecdotal evidence has been that it is more used 18 by African American defendants than it is by white 19 defendants.

20 I can tell you that I watch the news as 21 everyone else and I am concerned about the Trayvon 22 Martin case, about all of the cases in Florida 23 that seem to be going in the wrong direction. But 24 I don't know that I've seen one where the stand 25 your ground law was used successfully and used in

2 an immunity hearing in such a way as to create a 3 disparate impact.

4 I welcome that data. And as you all,
5 once I get that data if there is a change that can 6 be made in the law I'd seek to do it.

7 Thank you.

8 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
9 Representative Rutherford.

10 Next we'd like Mr. Abuznaid to present.

11 MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Thank you.

12 Thank you to the commission for convening this 13 initiative. We are extremely excited for the 14 future results.

15 I'm here representing the Dream
16 Defenders, a youth based human rights organization 17 in Miami, Florida. Our organization was created 18 in response to the tragic killing of Trayvon 19 Martin. A national and international dialogue has 20 been brewing around the harmfulness of stand your 21 ground laws, also known by many as "shoot first" 22 laws, and their implications for the right to 23 life, non-discrimination and equality before the 24 law. These stand your ground laws have, in a 25 sense, legalized the devaluing and dehumanizing of minority lives in a very real way.

We have recently heard from the members of the United Nations Human Rights Committee that stand your ground laws are incompatible with the right to life. We have also heard great concern from the Inter-American Commission on human rights regarding many of these tragedies. It is imperative that the federal government ensures that state and local governments do not promulgate laws that violate rights as fundamental as the right to life and equality before the law.

Stand your ground laws amount to state complicity in the perpetuation of violence by its citizens. Furthermore, our society has a long history of racial discrimination and a system that to put it mildly has never been kind to its black and brown minorities. Since we understand that the system itself has had to be constantly revised to deal with its inadequacies related to minorities it should come as no shock that a law allowing vigilantes to use fatal force on the streets would disproportionately affect minorities. Obvious history and notions aside, research has shown that stand your ground laws are

2 dangerous in terms of increasing levels of 3 homicide and are discriminatory in their 4 application as to race and gender.

5 Statistics based on a database compiled 6 by the Tampa Bay Times of SYG cases in Florida 7 since the passage of the law show that a defendant 8 who killed a white person was more likely to be 9 convicted of a crime than a defendant who killed a 10 black person. White-on-black homicides are 250 11 percent more likely to be found justified than 12 white-on-white homicides in stand your ground 13 states. This disparity increases to 354 percent 14 in stand your ground states. Moreover, the Urban 15 Institutes Justice Policy Center conducted a study 16 using the FBI's Supplementary Homicide Report for 17 2005 until 2009 and determined that less than 2 18 percent of homicides are eventually ruled to have 19 been committed in self-defense, that number 20 contains a significant split between stand your 21 ground and non-stand your ground states.

22 Women have also been disproportionately 23 impacted by stand your ground, especially those 24 dealing with domestic violence. Florida has been 25 home to the tragic handling of Marissa Alexander's

2 case. In a recent analysis of FBI homicide data 3 prepared by the Urban Institute comparing stand 4 your ground and non-stand your ground states and 5 examining the use of stand your ground laws in 6 cases involving women defendants, 13.5 percent of 7 cases where a white woman killed a black man were 8 found justified, whereas in contrast only 2.9 9 percent of cases where a black woman killed a 10 white man were found justified. Again, this 11 highlights the disproportionate -- thank you -- 12 disproportionate role that race plays in 13 justifiable homicides and how that is overlaid in 14 cases involving women defendants.

15 The data also revealed that such laws 16 introduce bias against black victims and in favor 17 of white defendants. In cases where the defendant 18 was black and the victim was white, there was 19 little difference between the stand your ground 20 states and other states. However, when the 21 defendant was white and the victim was black 16.85 22 percent of the homicides were ruled justified in 23 stand your ground states and only 9.15 percent in 24 non-stand your ground states.

25 Even worse, blanket immunity and broad

2 discretion to law enforcement offered by 3 Florida-type stand your ground laws infringe on 4 victims access to courts and their right to a 5 remedy. The more recent case involving the murder 6 of Jordan Davis and the jury's deadlock on his 7 murder -- his murder count exposed just how much 8 confusion stand your law -- stand your ground have 9 introduced into the criminal process.

10 It took a second trial and jury to 11 convict a man of a murder that everyone knew he 12 committed. Why did the jury find trouble with the 13 decision? Stand your ground laws of course, 14 because they allow for subjective biases, implicit 15 biases to guide decision making that could later 16 be fortified by law. Sadly, most victims and or 17 their families will never receive justice and 18 worst off they will have to live without their 19 loved ones for the rest of their lives all because 20 someone thought they looked suspicious while 21 walking through their father's neighborhood, or 22 they disturbed someone's movie experience while 23 texting the babysitter. As you may know, some of 24 the most high profile tragedies we have witnessed 25 in stand your ground have occurred here in

2 Florida. We have been the first state to enact 3 such a law and Florida should be the first state 4 to repeal such a law. The federal government must 5 support such a repeal. The federal government 6 must step in to condition funding to states based 7 on its ability to guarantee equal protection of 8 all of its citizens and elimination of laws that 9 hinder their ability to fulfill that duty.

10 On the ground here in Florida groups 11 like the Dream Defenders, Community Justice 12 Project, Power You, and others have been rallying 13 around communities concerned about that very 14 protection of our lives, which stand your ground 15 stands in the way of.

16 Unfortunately, the people's call for a 17 repeal has been ignored by the Florida 18 legislature. Not only that, but more legislation 19 being sent down the pipelines to gun us down, 20 including a so-called "warning shot" bill whose 21 advocates propelled it forward under the guise of 22 support for Marissa Alexander. But these 23 lawmakers have shown that they don't care about 24 Marissa. They don't care about Trayvon, Jordan or 25 our communities. Florida and other states are

2 currently looking at laws that would arm
3 schoolteachers with guns, and I would postulate 4 that it would not be long before one of our 5 teachers stands their ground against one of our 6 kids. We are not safe in our streets, our 7 neighborhoods, gas stations, movie theaters, and 8 soon to be schools.

9 Thank you.

10 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you. At 11 this point in time I would like to encourage 12 commissioners to begin to ask questions. I'll 13 cede the floor to Commissioner Yaki to begin. And 14 just identify for me then we'll keep a list.

15 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Thank you very much,
16 Mr. Chair. And this goes to all three panelists.
17 I was struck by the notion of due process, and I 18 think for, especially Mr. Rutherford who's a 19 lawyer as well. The issue of due process I think 20 is very important in stand your ground from a 21 number of different factors. But especially from 22 the standpoint of the person who may be the victim 23 of a stand your ground defense. That person may 24 be injured, that person may be dead, and not being 25 able to present his or her side of the story

2 you've essentially ceded the authority to be 3 judge, jury, and for lack of a better word, 4 executioner to the person asserting that. And I 5 guess, the question that I'm asking is, if you 6 were confronted with a statistic, a scientific 7 fact, that the research shows that people are more 8 likely to act in a certain way based on 9 unconscious racial stereotypes they may have 10 within them. I mean, I'm not talking about 11 somebody who says, "I'm a racist I hate, you know, 12 blankity, blank, blank, or blank, blank." I'm 13 talking about the studies that show that if you 14 give a test to people there's a disparity in how 15 people judge people based on what they look like.
16 It doesn't matter -- it doesn't matter if they 17 claim themselves to be racist or not. But the 18 most current example's the fact that if you show 19 -- if you talk about voter I.D. law to a white 20 voter, but if you accompany that image with that 21 of the image of a black person at the voting poll 22 support for a voter I.D. law shoots up well beyond 23 the statistical range. By the same token when you 24 have these tests that test for implicit -- 25 implicit bias a black person is much more likely

2 to be shot by someone much more than a white 3 person in these tests based on the fact that it's 4 unconscious bias in the system.

5 So I'm just asking when you have a law 6 like stand your ground which has in it essentially 7 a, for lack of a better word, a trigger component 8 in it to say I have to make a decision right here 9 and right now, what am I going to do. And if 10 there's a built in bias against finding for not 11 shooting against a white person and for shooting 12 against a black person how do you reconcile that 13 as a legislator and a policy maker?

14 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD:
15 Commissioner, thank you for that question. And I 16 can tell you that as a black man growing up -- who 17 grew up in South Carolina I am well aware of 18 implicit bias. And as the lawyer for the 19 gentleman that, most recently in South Carolina, 20 Levar Jones, who was shot by the trooper while 21 simply reaching for his wallet. A trooper who 22 I've known for 10 years. I can tell you that I 23 understand also how implicit bias comes into play.

24 In that particular case Mr. Jones was 25 requested by the trooper to get his I.D., he

2 patted his back pocket, not finding it there he 3 turned to go into the car and Trooper Groubert of 4 the South Carolina Highway Patrol shot at him four 5 times hitting him once in the hip.

6 The most troubling part was Trooper
7 Groubert's statement afterwards where he defined 8 or tried to define Mr. Jones as being an 9 aggressor. That he aggressively went into his 10 car. That he aggressively went into his case.
11 That he aggressively approached him. That he 12 aggressively -- none of which was indicated on the 13 video, but all of which, absent the video would 14 have been enough to clear Trooper Groubert.

15 Troubling because I still see members of 16 the South Carolina Highway Patrol when I go to 17 court who talk about race and that Trooper 18 Groubert is not a racist. And they missed the 19 point that he would not have done that if it were 20 not a black male, who looked unlike Trooper 21 Groubert. Who did something that Trooper 22 Groubert, in his mind, may have believed to be 23 aggressive. Because he was simply following his 24 commands.

25 I, like, Attorney General Holder was

2 walking in Georgetown when I was in college and a 3 cop walked up to me and placed his baton in my 4 chest and told me to cross the street. I said, 5 "Why?" And he hit me again with the baton and 6 told me to cross the street. And I crossed the 7 street. This was in 1989, this is not the '60s.

8 I am well aware of the bias that goes 9 on, but I also see the bias in the judicial 10 system. I've listened to the statistics that are 11 given and well aware that a white defendant in a 12 stand your ground case may have a better ability 13 to hire a lawyer to assert his stand your ground 14 rights than an African American defendant, that as 15 my client this week with the stand your ground 16 hearing he was able financially to bring me to the 17 scene to talk to law enforcement at the scene to 18 detail for them how this happened. And to mention 19 stand your ground to law enforcement before an 20 arrest was ever made. And I know that implicit 21 bias and racism run rampant throughout the 22 judicial system, especially in South Carolina.

23 It cannot be taken out of the system in 24 one fell swoop. And to suggest that by myself or 25 any other proponent of stand your ground is simply

2 ridiculous. I would be curious to know in -- 3 within the statistics how much racism as a whole 4 played into the impact in the end. And that means 5 that the law enforcement officer didn't care that 6 stand your ground laws existed. There was a black 7 person with a gun and a dead white person and he 8 was simply going to arrest them anyway and ignore 9 stand your ground. Which I have had happen as 10 well. Stand your ground, the way that I intended 11 when I voted for it, the way that I stand behind 12 it as a proponent is meant so that people do not 13 have to live in fear. That you don't have to walk 14 down the street with your children and someone 15 intends you harm and you would have to retreat 16 back to the furthest place. You could not elevate 17 force. You could not do any of those things, 18 which to me negate common sense.

19 Now in saying that about common sense I 20 again use common sense and apply the fact that 21 racism is rampant in our system and I don't know 22 how to take it out. Implicit bias is rampant in 23 our system and I don't know how to take it out.

24 But in a situation where an individual 25 is using the law and the law as it is currently

2 written in my case is, African Americans in some 3 cases, wrongfully used by white Americans, but 4 simply using the law as it is written judges are 5 supposed to determine without the implicit bias, 6 without the built in racisms that are in the 7 system, are supposed to determine that someone is 8 immune from prosecution. They are supposed to be 9 the ones that determine reasonableness. If 10 they're not doing their jobs in South Carolina we 11 would look to remove them. But I don't know how 12 to take that out of the system without taking out 13 the ability of other persons to defend themselves.

14 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Senator Smith.

15 SENATOR SMITH: If I can -- two points.
16 When you talked about due process, looking at the 17 Florida law, I haven't looked at the South 18 Carolina law, due process also involves the 19 officer on the scene. The Florida law is so 20 ambiguous that it's not a judge making the 21 determination it's an officer on the scene, 22 because the way the law's written it says, 23 "person cannot be arrested." And in the arrest 24 definition it says, "detained." So the Florida 25 law is so ambiguous that an officer coming up on a

2 scene in a park with a dead person and a person 3 holding a gun that says, "I'm invoking stand your 4 ground," realistically that officer cannot detain 5 that person, thus do a full investigation. We saw 6 it play out in the Trayvon Martin case where the 7 officers were confused as to whether we can even 8 detain Mr. Zimmerman.

9 And so when you talk about due process 10 that is a major problem in Florida. We're not 11 even getting to judges, we're not getting to 12 jury's. Officers on the scene are told within the 13 law, that we've tried to change, they cannot 14 arrest. An arrest is defined as "detaining" also.

15 And secondly I noticed in all of the 16 paperwork and I just heard, one of my pet peeves 17 when discussing stand your ground is when anyone 18 mentioned "retreat" today, remember Florida law 19 and I'm unsure of other laws, always had a word 20 that everyone neglects, it said, "safely retreat."

21 Prior to 2005 we had self-defense in 22 Florida that's often ignored. The Florida law has 23 always been, you had a duty to safely retreat.
24 There wasn't a "turn and run" portion of the 25 Florida law. It always had "safely retreat,"

2 which is ignored. So please, as people discuss 3 the Florida law today keep that in mind, prior to 4 2005 it had the words "safely retreat." It was 5 never a concern of you having to run away from 6 someone attacking you in public.

7 MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: If I may add, 8 I think that Senator Smith definitely contributed 9 a couple of very important points, but I also 10 wanted to add that while it's important that 11 people shouldn't have to live in fear, due to 12 stand your ground others have to live in fear now.

13 And also, looking at fear and breaking 14 down fear and finding that a lot of times the fear 15 is unfounded with -- Michael Dunn it was 16 because hip hop music was blaring from the car.
17 And Jordan Davis and his friends seemed to be like 18 thugs to Michael Dunn. And, you know, to George 19 Zimmerman, Trayvon Martin seemed suspicious 20 because he had an implicit fear of black men in 21 hoodies.

22 And so I think that people should not 23 have to live in fear, however we should navigate 24 that fear a little bit deeper and figure out where 25 it comes from. You know, the fact is that if

2 we're going allow for, you know, vigilantes to not 3 be afraid then those of us minorities who are 4 often viewed as threats by society might start 5 being very afraid of walking around our 6 neighborhoods.

7 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Before I give the 8 floor to Commissioner Narasaki I actually have a 9 question. Well, we really have been talking about 10 this issue and it is talked about in a black/white 11 binary for the most part. Is there anything each 12 of you might be able to shed light on in terms of 13 the impact on Latino's when the stand your ground 14 laws are used?

15 SENATOR SMITH: If I can, Mr. Chair.
16 It's -- in part of my introduction I talked about 17 the lack of statistics. We can only go by what's 18 been reported in say the St. Pete Times and those 19 others. That's part of the problem, we don't keep 20 the actual statistics about black, white, and 21 Latino. A lot of times when you're looking at it 22 you can only go by if it was said that "this was a 23 black male," or it doesn't say, "this was a 24 Hispanic male." And so it's hard to really give 25 you a definitive answer and that was part of the 2 concern that we have in Florida is actually 3 keeping statistics because part of what we 4 proposed is that if an officer comes up on the 5 scene in Hialeah and it's involving a Latino and 6 someone else and that officer determines that it's 7 a -- this is a stand your ground case, they could 8 go home. We wanted to make that officer keep 9 actual records that stand your ground, victim, 10 aggressor and perpetrator or however, so that we 11 can -- so that you can come back in 2 or 3 years 12 and discuss that.

13 So as you look at these laws please look 14 at -- it's hard to really answer your question 15 without anecdotally looking at facts because in a 16 lot of these states we don't require officers or 17 judges or prosecutors to keep actual statistics 18 that you can look at empirically in a year or two 19 to determine that.

20 MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: I would also 21 like to add that often times, you know, who's 22 categorized as white, Latino, Hispanic, Arab, 23 Muslim, has a great weight in factors.

24 If you look at the Department of 25 Corrections, you'll look down at the list of 2 inmates, you'll see all types of Muhammad, Ahmad 3 all that and it says "white." So I think 4 sometimes, you know, the way people are labeled 5 has a great deal with our ability to keep these 6 statistics.

7 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I've not 8 seen that data in South Carolina and certainly 9 would be interested in looking at making judges 10 and law enforcement officers keep that data to see 11 whether there is a disparate impact on Hispanic 12 males as a class.

13 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you.
14 Commissioner Narasaki.

15 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Thank you,
16 Mr. Chair. I want to thank Minority Leader 17 Rutherford for sharing the stories of his clients.
18 It shows how tragic all of these situations are.

19 I have two questions though. One is,
20 does South Carolina law also include like Florida 21 immunity from civil liability? And if so, what 22 should the rights of the family who's lost a loved 23 one who was an innocent bystander in that 24 situation if there is immunity from civil 25 liability because there's more than one victim in 2 that case?

3 And the second is, it sounds like you do 4 support data collection. Would you support the 5 federal government tying funding for federal 6 criminal justice funding to requiring states to 7 set up sufficient reporting systems?

8 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I'll answer
9 the second question first and say, absolutely.
10 The collection of data is essential to the 11 understanding of any law and its impact. And in 12 these cases especially so because, like I said, in 13 South Carolina I have not seen what I've seen in 14 Florida. I could not stand here as a lawyer, and 15 a proponent of justice, and look at what goes on 16 in Florida and act like it's okay.

17 The first question is and -- now I'm 18 losing the first question --

19 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Civil liability.

20 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Right, yes.
21 South Carolina -- the stand your ground laws came 22 out of the conservative group that sent the law to 23 South Carolina. We looked at it, we passed it.
24 It mirrors Florida's law. In fact, our case law 25 in South Carolina initially came from Florida as

2 the Supreme Court looked at how to deal with stand 3 your ground cases. It not only offered civil 4 liability -- I'm sorry, civil immunity, it also 5 allows for the return of attorney fees if someone 6 is sued after they are found immune from 7 prosecution under a stand your ground case.

8 As to the victims and what the victims 9 can do, the problem gets to if you have a 10 situation where someone has truly availed 11 themselves of the stand your ground law, which is 12 difficult to determine. And I say that because if 13 a law enforcement officer comes out to the scene 14 and believes that an individual used self-defense, 15 that law enforcement officer's typically an 16 investigator at that level making that 17 determination, not just a line officer, but 18 somebody that has, hopefully, years of experience.

19 That person is determining that the 20 individual, the perpetrator in this case because 21 there's a shooting or a stabbing or whatever the 22 -- the -- it's the person that took the life. So 23 I don't want to call them the victim, but the law 24 enforcement officer may consider them to be the 25 victim.

2 That he is determining that they didn't 3 do anything wrong or that they simply acted in 4 self-defense. Your stand your ground is somewhat 5 of an articulation of self-defense.

6 In doing so stand your ground says they 7 are not to be detained, they are not to be 8 arrested. Which some people take -- well, they're 9 not investigated. I disagree. I think that an 10 investigator should, at least, in South Carolina 11 an investigator would investigate a murder case 12 not just a line officer.

13 That investigator determines that this 14 person used self-defense, that they can articulate 15 that they had a lawful right to be where they 16 were, that they had a reasonable fear for their 17 life, and that they acted on that fear and that 18 belief. The investigator determines that they are 19 clear and he's not going to detain or arrest them.
20 Which, under self-defense he should not have done 21 anyway. But, South Carolina, as I stated before 22 had no self-defense law it was based on case law.
23 So in order for an individual to be cleared in 24 South Carolina they would have to have been 25 charged with murder or charged with whatever the offense was --

3

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Yeah, I'm

4 actually, though, I'm not focused on the criminal 5 process I think it's -- I'm focused on the civil liability, which as you well know is a different

7 standard. And the question here is, I'm not 8 focusing on whether the person who felt fear, what he did versus the person who was causing the fear.

9

10

I'm talking about the innocent bystanders who had 11 nothing to do with either side of the equation, 12 who nonetheless lost their lives. So what is the 13 recompense for them?

14

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: The 15 recompense --

16

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: And are you

17 concerned that this stand your ground law could in 18 fact create a huge public safety issue because now

you're not talking about someone who's close to 20 their home, but you're talking about someone who 21 could be in a crowd wildly shooting. Is that 22 something that you feel comfortable with, and if 23 there's no civil liability do you feel like there 24 might be a tendency for more of that to happen?

25

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: No, ma'am.

2 And the reason why I say that, where I was going 3 was, because on a lot of these cases those where 4 no one is arrested or detained there's not going 5 to be enough information out there for a civil 6 case.

7 But nine times out of ten, and I would 8 venture to say 99 times out of a 100 for innocent 9 victims, for victims in these cases, there's not 10 going to be any recompense on a civil basis 11 anyway. Rarely could you find insurance to cover 12 a -- someone that was involved in a stand your 13 ground case. And for the innocent victim -- 14 there's a perfect case on that in South Carolina, 15 an individual who is a convicted felon was in an 16 entertainment district, another individual walked 17 up and pulled a weapon, clear on video. The 18 second individual pulled his gun, shot at the guy 19 that was pulling the gun and hit and paralyzed a 20 University of South Carolina student. The shooter 21 in that case would have been able to avail himself 22 of the stand your ground law because it was clear 23 on video that he was reacting to someone else 24 pulling a gun.

25 He was a convicted felon. He did not

2 have a right to possess a firearm and the federal 3 government gave him 23 years in prison.

4 And so that's how they dealt with that 5 case. But would he have -- if he had shot, as he 6 did, and paralyzed someone would they be able to 7 sue him, he wouldn't have any assets for them to 8 be able to sue him anyway --

9 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Yes, but what 10 we're talking about in your case, your client had 11 a house.

12 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Right. So 13 -- well, he rented the house and so there was no 14 insurance.

15 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Well, I think, 16 you know, the issue about whether they would have 17 actually had money or not is not the question that 18 I'm asking. The question is, should there be some 19 kind of recognition in the law that something 20 happen to someone who is an innocent bystander?

21 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Thank you.
22 And, yes, to answer that question succinctly, an 23 innocent bystander who is shot can always sue, 24 whether they could ever collect is a different 25 story. Even under this they could sue someone that was cleared because -- well, when you say 3

2

"innocent" it -- it gets dicey. And the short 4 answer is, "I don't know."

5

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Ah, Representative

6

-- Senator --

7

SENATOR SMITH: If I can, I think you would -- the Florida law clearly says immunity 9 even from civil liability. So I guess in your 10 scenario -- or even in your scenario if the person 11 negligently is defending themselves and then just 12 sprays the room or something that in Florida even though they were negligent and just, you know, 14 spraying a room they're immune from civil 15 liability even though they were highly negligent

8

13

16 as long as they claim stand your ground. And I think that is a concern. I don't know if your 18 statute is that specific.

17

19

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: The statute

20 is that specific but I think -- I don't think you can negligently spray a room. I think if you're 22 spraying a room you're not going to be cleared -- 23 you should not be cleared under the statute by 24 stand your ground. That's not defending yourself.

21

25

That's negligently spraying a room.

2 And there's a difference -- so if -- if 3 someone can show me the case where someone is 4 clearly defending themselves and found immune from 5 prosecution by -- under stand your ground, and 6 should be sued, I'd love to look at it. But you 7 can't negligently spray a room and claim stand 8 your ground, that's not the same thing --

9 SENATOR SMITH: There is a Miami case in 10 which it happened, a drive-by shooting and a 3 11 year old sitting on her porch, the young man was 12 defending himself under stand your ground, and 13 when he shot at the guys shooting at him he hit a 14 3 year old sitting on her porch. He's immune from 15 civil liability, we're not talking about the 16 criminal case, we're talking about civil 17 liabilities. So her family could not sue that 18 perpetrator even though he's maybe judgment-proof 19 because he's broke there still is a civil immunity 20 from going after that person who shot.

21 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: But as 22 tragic as it is that 3 year olds parents should 23 not be suing him they should be suing the people 24 in the car that were shooting at him. That's what 25 stand your ground says. And to take that to its

2 logical conclusion --

3

SENATOR SMITH: That's what we're 4 talking about --

5

6 suggestion is that the individual that was being 7 shot at should, what, get shot? Should not be able to defend themselves? The civil liability for that 3 year old, for those parents of that 3 10 year old, goes against the initial people that 11 started the shooting, not against the person that,

8

12 unfortunately, and tragically, took the life of 13 their 3 year old. So liability would extend not 14 to the person that did the shooting, but to the 15 person that caused the shooting to take place.

16

So, yes, the person that did the actual 17 shooting would be immune, but the person that 18 caused the shooting absent a collection, absent

19 being able to do so, should be the one that is 20 sued.

21

So they are not blocked from civil 22 liability, the civil liability is taken from the 23 person that is found immune and extended to the 24 person that actually caused this to transpire in 25 the first place.

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

In the case that I just mentioned in the entertainment district it would be that they would sue the person that pulled the gun. In the case that I talked about initially where the people were in their home, they would sue the girls in the car, if all of these people are rich, and understand that you have to have the ability to pay.

But in the 17 year olds case there would be no -- they would have nobody to sue because their child was simply involved in -- and it's a one-on-one situation. But anytime you've got an innocent person who was hit, someone not involved in whatever is going on, that person's civil action is against the wrongdoer not the person that is found immune.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Senator, did you want to add something it looked like you were --

SENATOR SMITH: Well, I guess we're -- I'm a little confused. The wrongdoer even if -- when I gave the scenario of the person doing the shooting from the car -- and I understand under the Representative's scenario the person who initially -- who initiated it and caused the 2 incident to happen should be the person liable.

3 But if the person that's actually doing the 4 shooting even though they're defending themselves, 5 if they defend themselves in a negligent manner 6 under the case law they're immune from -- from -- 7 even in the case of negligence they're immune from 8 civil liability.

9 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes, sir.
10 And this is where this came up and this is prior 11 to stand your ground. And it came up several 12 times in the case that I tried with the 15 year 13 old deceased victim.

14 If someone robs a store and the store 15 owner has a gun and he pulls the gun to defend 16 himself and he accidentally hits someone else in the 17 store, do we say that store owners should not have 18 guns to protect themselves?

19 Do we mandate that the police always 20 shoot straight? Do we take guns from police 21 officers who mistakenly hit innocent victims? The 22 answer is, that the wrongdoer, the person that is 23 causing the problem in the first place, is the one 24 that's subjected to civil liability and criminal 25 liability. That's the way that it should go.

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

I understand that under stand your ground we have an issue of whether this actually -- whether this person is actually the wrongdoer. And that's the bigger issue. But as it relates to civil liability, the civil liability goes to the person that created the wrong in the first place.

You can't say that someone negligently shot if the only reason why they shot is because they were being shot at. You can't mandate that -- in the case that I just mentioned with the South Carolina Trooper, at pointblank range he fired at my client 4 times, he hit him once in the hip and just barely on the side. He almost missed him that time too, 4 times, pointblank range.

You don't mandate that people shoot straight. You would hope that they would not have to shoot at all. And stand your ground, in my opinion, suggests that I have a right to defend myself and I should not fear defending myself that later on someone's going to say, "Well, you should have shot better." And that was actually the testimony from the police officer as to why he arrested my client, he said, "He should have been a better shot."

2 That's not the law. That ain't the law 3 for police officers. It's not the law for 4 individuals. The law says I have the right to be 5 clear, to free myself from thugs, from people that 6 intend to do me harm. And that if I defend myself 7 I should not be sued, nor should I be arrested, 8 detained, or prosecuted because of it.

9 I'm expensive and if someone is arrested 10 or detained and they have to hire me to defend 11 them they have spent a lot of money doing so. And 12 in doing so and they are initially found -- and 13 they are eventually found immune from prosecution 14 what the system has said is that you were wronged, 15 you were wronged by police officers who may have 16 seen you as a black man who killed a white person 17 who they didn't want to find you immune at the 18 scene so they arrested you. They made you go 19 through this trial. That's wrong. And that 20 happens. We can't take racism out of the system, 21 but we can't also sit here and act like situations 22 don't occur. And they will. And they will 23 continue to where someone defends themselves and 24 then finds themselves placed in a position where 25 they have to avail themselves of the stand your ground law.

2

6

And once they do so civil liability is there. It is clear. And it goes against the wrongdoer, the perpetrator, not the person that defended themselves.

10

11 12

13

14

16

SENATOR SMITH: Every accident is not negligence, and I concede that. And Representative Rutherford you keep talking about "accident" and I concede that you don't have to be a perfect shot, but there are times when people are negligent. If it's an accident where your store owner, if he accidentally shoots someone, you must agree that all accidents are not negligence. We're talking about in cases where there is true negligence.

17

19 20

22

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I think by definition accidents are negligent, because if it's not negligent, then it's intentional. So you're only getting situations where someone either negligently did something or they intentionally did something.

23

25

You can do reckless. Reckless is they did it negligently but they should have known better. Someone that gets in an accident for

2 speeding on a highway, they're going 10 miles over 3 the speed limit, that's negligence. They're going 4 100 miles over the speed limit, that's reckless 5 and there's a difference.

6 SENATOR SMITH: Well, I stand corrected,
7 even in reckless in Florida you are still immune.

8 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: But, again 9 if the recklessness -- if the reckless act was 10 brought on, simply by the person doing a wrong 11 act, meaning that, my recklessness I'm firing 12 because this person shot a gun at me we're not 13 going to go back in South Carolina, and I doubt 14 Florida will either, and say that when you are 15 fired upon you can only fire one shot and that 16 shot must be at the upper torso, at the head.

17 That's not the law. The wrongdoing is 18 the person that caused this person to fire a shot.
19 In the Trayvon Martin case, and I've said this 20 repeatedly, what would have been interesting in 21 Florida is if Trayvon Martin would have shot 22 George Zimmerman and tried to avail himself of 23 stand your ground, and was denied that by law 24 enforcement and then by a judge. That's what 25 would have been interesting whether a black man in 2 a hoodie could avail themselves of stand your 3 ground.

4 That's a test of the law. That's a test 5 of the law. What George Zimmerman did, did not 6 use your stand your ground. He simply said, "I'm 7 white, he's black. Self-defense." People found 8 that.

9 But if Trayvon Martin would have shot 10 George Zimmerman, that's a test of the law.

11 The five -- it's five points, the 12 entertainment district shooting where the young 13 lady was paralyzed, that gentleman's family called 14 me and I knew that there was a stand your ground 15 case. I did not know that he was a convicted 16 felon. That was going to be a test case in South 17 Carolina as to whether they truly have the 18 backbone to support when an individual that we 19 know society -- whether he's Latino or African 20 American has shot someone, an innocent white woman 21 who's now paralyzed, whether he's going to be able 22 to use the stand your ground defense.

23 They were able to skirt that by letting 24 the federal government take it over, but that's a 25 test of the law. That's a test of the law.

2

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Before we go on to 3

Commissioner Achtenberg, actually Commissioner

4

Yaki has an article here that is germane to the 5 colloquy that was going on here.

6

Commissioner Yaki and then we'll go to 7

Commissioner Achtenberg and then -- no, I know 8

I've got a list here. It's Achtenberg, Patricia 9

Timmons-Goodson, and then Gail.

10

COMMISSIONER YAKI: I just wanted to 11 point out that cutting through -- cutting through 12 all of this is that a South Carolina Judge has 13 interpreted the statute to be identical to Florida

14 and to grant civil immunity to an individual who 15

-- who in exercising his or her stand your ground 16 rights shot and killed an innocent bystander. I just wanted to put that on the record.

17

18

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Right, 19 that's my case.

20

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner

21

Achtenberg, then Commissioner Timmons-Goodson, and 22 then Commissioner Heriot.

23

And do any of the Commissioners on the 24 phone want to indicate an opportunity to ask a 25 question?

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Mr. Chair, this 3 is Kirsanow, I may have one question.

4

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. I'll have 5 you after Commissioner Heriot.

6

Commissioner Achtenberg.

7

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you,
8 Mr. Chairman. Senator Smith, my -- I have many 9 grave concerns about the Florida version of the 10 stand your ground law. The most significant of 11 which is the interjecting of complete subjectivity 12 into the self-defense law of Florida.

And by that I mean what used to be an 14 objective standard, whether or not it was a 15 reasonable person would have perceived the threat 16 sufficiently to warrant his or her response with 17 deadly force not whether or not a person with a, 18 you know, a thin -- a thin skinned plaintiff or 19 what have you, but whether or not this person 20 perceived that they were in -- in danger of being 21 -- having deadly force used against them they 22 responded preemptively and in kind.

23

Can you explain the rationales being 24 offered at the time that this revolutionary 25 statute was adopted by the Florida legislature?

2 What was the -- was there a precipitating event 3 that encouraged the legislature to throw out a 4 hundred years of common law and to change the 5 paradigm such that implicit bias is then baked 6 into the system?

7 We talked before about the limitations 8 to due process and the assertion was made, with 9 which I agree that given that there's implicit 10 bias abounding it affects everything that we do, 11 including what judges do, and what prosecutors do, 12 and what police do, and what persons on the street 13 do. But why bake in that bias into the 14 assumptions of this new law, what was the 15 rationale offered at the time, Senator?

16 SENATOR SMITH: It's funny that you 17 mention it, there was a case in North Florida that 18 was that cited as the impetus of this. It was a 19 -- it was after a hurricane, an elderly gentleman 20 and his wife -- and what was told to the 21 legislature by the proponents of it, there was an 22 elderly gentleman and his wife living in their 23 trailer after a hurricane and a man from South 24 Carolina who was working in Florida to help with 25 the clean up came to the gentleman's house, and an

2 altercation ensued and the older gentleman shot 3 the young guy. And it was told that the older 4 gentleman was arrested and had to go through all 5 of these months of worrying about whether he was 6 going to be convicted, had to get lawyers and 7 everything. But it turned out to be a fallacy 8 once the purporters started looking into it later.
9 But just -- the climate in the Florida legislature 10 is the easiest law to pass is something, you know, 11 giving people more gun rights or tough on crime or 12 something like that.

13 And to go more to your concern it wasn't 14 thought that it would be such a subjective 15 standard. When it was passed and I voted against 16 it, but even colleagues of mine that voted for it 17 did not know and it wasn't fully explained that it 18 would be a subjective standard. And that's why 19 we've tried to go in subsequently and at least 20 move it to more of an objective standard. Because 21 as you've stated that's where the racial bias 22 comes in. That's where some of the concerns come 23 in because it's such a subjective standard that 24 people can avail themselves of this even -- not in 25 a reasonable circumstance. I don't reasonably

2 think that I should shoot someone in a movie 3 theater because they threw popcorn at me. But if 4 it's subjective, if I go to a subjective and did 5 this person actually fear when the person stood up 6 and threw popcorn, they can avail themselves.

7 And so that's been some of the concerns 8 that we've had and some of the changes that we've 9 proposed to make it more of an objective standard 10 instead of subjective.

11 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: And did the 12 legislature recognize that all of these judgments 13 would be made at the scene and essentially by the 14 officer? Did they understand that what had 15 traditionally been the prerogative of judges and 16 lawyers in courtrooms with due process, 17 evidentiary protections, et cetera, et cetera, 18 would now be pushed down to the investigating 19 officer to make some kind of, at least, 20 preliminary judgment about whether or not the 21 person had reasonable -- not reasonable fear, 22 whether the person had fear at all and I therefore 23 used deadly force against an aggressing, you know, 24 an aggressor?

25 SENATOR SMITH: At the time in 2005 I

2 was the Minority Leader of the Florida House and I 3 can honestly say this wasn't a big issue. When 4 stand your ground passed, myself and two other 5 lawyers that were in the Democratic Party, we 6 wrote a letter -- we voted against it. And only 7 about 12 of us did. The entire Senate, 8 bipartisan, every member of the Florida Senate 9 voted for it. It wasn't seen as a groundbreaking 10 piece of legislation, and it sat actually dormant 11 and not used until you started hearing about the 12 Trayvon Martin case. So remember this passed in 13 2005, and when did you really hear about this law?
14 After the Trayvon Martin case.

15 And now we've seen a plethora of cases 16 come after it because people are starting to avail 17 themselves and become embolden because they think, 18 you know, "I got this great get out of jail ticket 19 to do my aggression."

20 But, honestly, in 2005 members did not 21 understand the full ramifications, non-lawyer 22 members because we're, you know, legislature of a 23 lot of people, did not understand the 24 ramifications. And even the lawyers in the 25 legislature didn't fully understand because it was

2 such a new and groundbreaking piece of 3 legislation. It was just sold on a political 4 basis as "you shouldn't have to cut and run, you 5 shouldn't have to retreat, you shouldn't have to 6 turn and run. And this is the way of making -- 7 giving your citizens a chance not to have to turn 8 and run and get shot in the back."

9 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you,
10 Senator, I appreciate that.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Next we have 12 Commissioner Timmons-Goodson, who will be followed 13 by Commissioners' Heriot, Kirsanow, Kladney, and 14 then Commissioner Yaki.

15 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Thank you
16 so very much, Mr. Chair.

17 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: You're welcome.

18 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: My 19 question is for Representative Rutherford. One of 20 the major criticisms offered of the stand your 21 ground laws by opponents is that it so easily 22 allows the escalation of fairly small incidents 23 into deadly affairs.

24 And with that in mind I'd like to just 25 explore with you for just a few moments your

2 thoughts based on statements that you've made.

3 You've said early on that at the time 4 that the stand your ground law was enacted in 5 South Carolina that there was no self-defense law.
6 That laws related to self-defense were outdated 7 and archaic. That one could not elevate, I 8 believe you said, the use of force.

9 In fact the common law was what was in 10 effect. Is that not right? In other words, the 11 judges used the common law, applied that to the 12 facts that came before them. Is that right?

13 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: They applied 14 prior case law, exactly.

15 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Okay.
16 And that prior case law was based on common law?

17 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: That's 18 right.

19 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Now 20 you've also said that stand your ground or the 21 stand your ground that you support means that 22 people don't have to live in fear. That elevating 23 -- not elevating force doesn't make sense to you.

24 First, I guess I want to know -- ask you 25 to explain your thought that the laws that were in effect or applied relating to self-defense prior 3 to stand your ground laws, why they were archaic, you know, what makes you say they were outdated?

2

5

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Well, 6 remember South Carolina had no statute on 7 self-defense. So it was simply based on your 8 ability to articulate your self-defense or why you 9 did something in a trial while you were on trial

10 for a judge, determine that are 11 absolutely right. You defended yourself. You have a right to do so. And in doing so you should be immune from prosecution.

12

13

14

The non-elevation --

2 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Well, let 3 me just ask you. How does that differ from any 4 other defendant defending themselves in response to 5 a criminal charge filed or a civil case where a 6 plaintiff asserts something and, you know, one is 7 called upon to gather your resources and to 8 defend, I mean, how is that --

9 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Your liberty 10 is not in jeopardy in a civil case. In a criminal 11 case your liberty is in jeopardy. And so, for 12 most criminal cases if a trial is going forward on 13 a forgery or a fraud charge, what you're saying is 14 that "I did not do this."

15 When it's related to self-defense then 16 stand your ground requires that you say, "I did 17 this. And I did this for this reason." And 18 you're asking that a judge in an immunity hearing 19 say, "What you did is reasonable." Or "What you 20 did is unreasonable."

21 In the case where the gentleman was 22 involved in the home invasion and he tried to say, 23 "I should be cleared under stand your ground." 24 The judge sent it up. The Court of Appeals said, 25 "No, give him a hearing." The judge gave him a hearing and denied him immunity. Period.

2

3

It is based on reasonableness. And I'll 4 read you 1611.420 --

5

COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: That's --

6 that is -- well, we could go in different 7 directions, but I hear -- and I didn't mean to cut 8 you off. But I hear what you're saying. But you 9 do have bond in cases that would have involved

10 self-defense as you would have had bond offered in 11 other cases in South Carolina, do you not?

12

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes, ma'am.

13

And bond is based on -- what should be based on, 14 simply someone's -- whether they're going to show 15 back up in court. Whether they're a danger.

16

If they're charged with murder even 17 under the stand your ground cases they would still 18 have to go forward and get a bond. But at least 19 at the bond hearing you'd have the right, as I did 20 in the most recent case to say, "We believe that 21 this -- that stand your ground is going to apply

22 in this." And have a judge listen and agree or 23 disagree and set bond accordingly.

24

Bonds are not meant to punish, but most 25 often in murder cases they do exactly that.

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

25

COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Okay. So as I understand that the reason that your existing or the existing South Carolina laws relating to self-defense were viewed as archaic is that it required an individual to -- it required an individual to go forward and to defend themselves?

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: To stand trial. And at trial only then could you defend yourself, not prior to that point.

COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Okay. Second and last question. You say that stand your ground law to you means that you don't have to live in force --

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Fear.

COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: -- that it doesn't make sense to you that one would not be permitted to elevate force. I guess I'm left wondering why is it not common sense that if someone comes up and pushes you, that you push them back, or someone comes up and hits you with a fist that you hit them with a fist, why should -- I mean, why does it make such sense that you could elevate the force that you use to a gun or a knife in response to being pushed or hit with a fist?

2

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD:

3

Commissioner, respectfully, I submit that you should have a right to not have people hit you 5 with a fist. That you have a right not to be pushed. That you have a right not to wait and see 7 what the next step will be once someone hits you 8 in the face.

4

6

9

You should not wait to see whether 10 you're going to be knocked out. You should have a right to pull that gun if you have one and say, 12

11

"Leave me alone. I don't want to be bothered."

13

And that's what the general assembly found. We 14 have a right to live in peace.

15

And peace means that I'm not going to 16 wait on you to hit me. I'm not going to wait on 17 you to push me. I'm standing with my two children 18

-- I have two little boys. And if you're going to 19 walk up to me and try an assault me or one of them 20

I'm not going to wait to see what your next step 21 is going to be before I decide what I'm going to 22 do.

23

That's what the general assembly found.

24

And I think that's common sense.

25

COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Thank

1

2

you, sir.

3

4

Heriot, you have the floor.

5

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Thank you, 6

7

Here's my problem with the discussion so far. It seems like a lot of what is being said

8

here is not special to stand your ground at all,

10 but rather could be an argument against the 11 doctrine of self-defense in the first place. And 12

I assume that nobody here is in favor of repealing

13 self-defense as a basic doctrine here.

14

Representative Rutherford, I was 15 impressed by your discussion a little while ago

16 about implicit bias. Let me see if I can restate

17 it and see whether you still agree with me.

18

The way that I see it, as you put 19 it implicit bias is background. It's involved not just in stand your ground laws it's involved in 21 every kind of law there can be including the 22 exercise of basic self-defense.

20

23

So if we're talking about a non-stand 24 your ground state one of the things that has to be 25 guarded against, generally, is implicit bias

2 against black males, a trigger-happy person who 3 believes he's under attack, but isn't. You know, 4 he thinks the black male is about to attack him, 5 but it's not true, he pulls the gun. And, you 6 know, that problem's always there.

7 And that problem's there when we talk 8 about home invasions and the general Castle 9 Doctrine. And what stand your ground adds to that 10 is simply now there's this small number of cases 11 -- I think it's important to recognize stand your 12 ground applies only on very, very few cases. I 13 mean, you know, the result will turn on stand your 14 ground in just a shockingly small number of cases.
15 These will be the cases that don't occur in a 16 home. Do occur in some place where the person who 17 is exercising self-defense or supposedly 18 exercising self-defense believes reasonably that 19 he could retreat but chooses not to.

20 In most of these cases in public places 21 that's not going to be possible to retreat and 22 therefore stand your ground doesn't make any 23 difference you still have a right to self-defense.
24 And we're talking about this tiny number of case 25 -- cases where the defendant or the person who is

2 exercising or is said to be exercising 3 self-defense knows that he can retreat but chooses 4 not to, that's a very small number of cases.
5 Stand your ground adds an implicit bias problem 6 against the black male who is perceived to be 7 attacking.

8 But on the other hand it helps the black 9 male in the opposite position, the one who's 10 actually purportedly exercising self-defense, he 11 has to worry about implicit bias at the time of 12 trial whence the jury is second guessing him on 13 whether or not he could have retreated. They 14 weren't there. And they may be more likely to 15 find "Hey, you know, the guy says that he was 16 under attack, we don't believe him." Or "Hey, he 17 says that he could have retreated, we don't 18 believe him."

19 So implicit bias is everywhere in that 20 respect. And stand your ground doesn't add to the 21 problem for the black male it simply helps a 22 different category of black male.

23 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Absolutely.
24 You succinctly stated exactly what my position has 25 been. And I agree with you. I think that a lot

2 of these cases that have been mentioned aren't 3 necessarily turning on stand your ground, but an 4 officer and an investigator's perception of what 5 is self-defense any way. And then he's saying, 6 "Well, because of stand your ground I'm not going 7 to arrest you -- I'm not going to detain you." 8 But it's his assertion of self-defense in using 9 that as a --

10 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: So the second 11 manifestation that I saw with this problem where 12 we seem to be moving between self-defense and 13 stand your ground and not recognizing that the 14 arguments were being -- made that apply to 15 self-defense too.

16 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Right.

17 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Was -- in the area
18 -- Senator Smith, you mentioned the detain issue 19 in the Florida statute. But isn't that just what 20 the basic law would be with regard to self-defense 21 if police officers investigate a crime and it's 22 not a stand your ground case, it's just basic 23 self-defense, everybody agrees there was no 24 ability to retreat so stand your ground doesn't 25 make any difference. You don't arrest someone if

2 the police officer concludes, "Oh, I believe based 3 on what I know this was self-defense."

4 You wouldn't arrest somebody like that,
5 would you? You wouldn't advocate that would you?

6 SENATOR SMITH: The concern with stand 7 your ground, and it puts the officer in a very 8 defensive posture. Before stand your ground I 9 agree you need probable cause and you would do 10 that. But stand your ground, now the officer now 11 has a statute that says I cannot detain and 12 also --

13 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: But he couldn't 14 before could he?

15 SENATOR SMITH: -- ma'am, if I could --

16 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: On a self-defense 17 case you couldn't -- he can't detain somebody if 18 the police --

19 SENATOR SMITH: Within that statute it 20 explicitly gives a civil liability to that police 21 department if it's found that they were detained 22 in a stand your ground case. So it couldn't 23 before but that was case law and officers use 24 prudent judgment. But now an officer has a 25 statute -- a statute that says "I cannot detain,"

2 and "by the way if I detain I might get sued."
3 And so it affects the way that officer truly 4 investigates. As before he would just use 5 investigative skills and figure out do I have due 6 process. Now he has this hover above his head 7 saying, "Oh, my God, if I use my investigative 8 skills and I may be wrong I have a statute 9 particularly pointing to civil liability for me 10 and my department."

11 So it affects the officers use of his 12 investigative skills because now we've put in 13 statute -- not just common sense and case law, but 14 we've put in statute that you better not detain.
15 And by the way if you make the wrong judgment, 16 officer on the street, your department's getting 17 sued.

18 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes, but 19 that's exactly what should happen. You should not 20 detain people that simply defended themselves that 21 are not wrongdoers.

22 Commissioner, you're exactly right and 23 that turns on, in my situations, African American 24 males who are guilt -- who are dealing with that 25 implicit bias from police officers going, you

2 know, "I'm not going to give you that benefit of 3 the doubt."

4 And that police officer should be sued
5 simply because he now is detaining Trayvon Martin, 6 should he have shot George Zimmerman, saying, 7 "Well, I'm not going to -- you're a black man in a 8 hoodie I'm not going to give you that same 9 defense."

10 The police should be sued when they are 11 detaining and arresting people that are not 12 wrongdoers.

13 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: The third area
14 where I saw, again, getting off track and acting 15 as if, you know, we're talking about stand your 16 ground when in fact the argument that is being 17 made would apply to self-defense generally was 18 with the civil liability area.

19 You know, it's massively more important 20 that, like, when people are exercising their right 21 to self-defense just in an ordinary case where 22 stand your ground wouldn't be involved, you've 23 still got the problem of mistaken self-defense.
24 You know, if the gun goes off and hits a third 25 person or they were mistaken in the first place,

2 they shoot someone reasonably believing that they 3 are under attack, but wrong.

4 And, you know, I teach torts in law
5 school. One of the cases in my book is Crovicia 6 (phonetic) versus Raymond. It's not a stand your 7 ground case. It's an old Colorado case from the 8 early part of the 20th century where someone 9 exercising self-defense reasonably, but 10 mistakenly, they end up shooting someone and that 11 person was not actually attacking them.

12 The law has been that as long as you're 13 acting reasonably you're not liable. It doesn't 14 strike me that we're really talking about 15 something different here.

16 Now you can argue about whether or not 17 that's good law. You know, maybe -- maybe it 18 should be better policy to say that you're not 19 criminally liable for use of self-defense, but if 20 it turns out that you made a mistake, even if it 21 was a reasonable one then you should be liable for 22 civil damages.

23 If I am not mistaken, in ancient Rome 24 that was what the law was. You had a right to 25 self-defense as to criminal liability, but if you

2 got it wrong and you shot somebody even though it 3 was reasonable and it turns out to have been wrong 4 you were civilly liable. And some people have 5 advocated such a rule.

6 But that's really quite detached from 7 the basic stand your ground issue. In a given 8 state could choose to make civil liability 9 available for mistaken use of self-defense that is 10 nevertheless reasonable or they could choose not 11 to. But it's not -- it's not the core issue we're 12 concerned with and I think we make a mistake when 13 we start analyzing particular states statutes here 14 and have they been drafted the best way possible.
15 As a federal commission we should be more 16 concerned with is the concept of stand your ground 17 a good concept or not. And, you know, if any of 18 you have a comment on that?

19 SENATOR SMITH: Ma'am, I would disagree 20 when you talk about the civil liability because 21 you keep getting to reasonableness and under prior 22 common law and course law -- case law even when 23 you're talking about civil liability you say 24 reasonableness. But under stand your ground and 25 stand your ground specific, you don't even get to

2 reasonableness because it's a blanket, a blanket 3 of -- of absolution of liability, you don't even 4 get to reasonableness. If you're asserting stand 5 your ground you never get to anyone determining 6 whether you were reasonable. And me trying to 7 defend myself against you and I just start 8 shooting everyone. You don't get there because 9 the statute written in Florida absolves you of any 10 liability, even reckless -- reckless liability --

11 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: But my point is 12 we're a federal commission, we don't like, you 13 know, nickel and dime the state statute. If you 14 don't like that aspect of the statute then the 15 Florida legislature gets to change that. But 16 that's not the basic concept of stand your ground, 17 the basic concept of stand your ground is 18 different from that.

19 You know, if South Carolina has a 20 different statute and a different approach to 21 civil liability. And Virginia, or Minnesota, or 22 South Dakota have different approaches to that, 23 this is not a commission convened to fly speck the 24 -- the Florida statute. That's not the core 25 concept of stand your ground.

SENATOR SMITH: I thought -- this is a commission on human rights and if there is a --

4

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Civil rights.

5

6

SENATOR SMITH: Civil rights. If there is a statute in a state in this nation that encourages people to act recklessly, and even though it may be nickel-and-diming in Florida, and I would hope that Florida would change that. But if Florida doesn't have the fortitude to do the right thing by its people I would hope that this commission would at least speak to giving Florida that fortitude to say "you know, what this statute is wrong because it encourages people to be reckless --

17 18 19

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: But the constitution doesn't actually work that way. We don't have authority to tell Florida how to -- 20

SENATOR SMITH: -- encourage -- 21

22

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: -- we have certain --

23

25

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Order. Order here. We're talking over one another. The record's not going to be clear.

But in the interest of time if I could ask Representative Smith to just wrap up what you're saying.

And Mr. Abuznaid, did you have anything to respond to on this? Otherwise, I'll when -- then I'll move onto the next commissioner. But, if you have -- when he's done if you have something to say, then we'll move on to Commissioner Kirsanow in the interest of time.

Mr. -- Representative do you want to finish your statement?

SENATOR SMITH: -- no, no --

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay.

Mr. Abuznaid.

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Yeah, I'd just like to say that I hope that I wasn't implying that there's something wrong with self-defense. I actually think if self-defense was so good we should have left it that way. And so I don't think, for me, I get the Castle Doctrine, I get why that was important. I think that's why there was a distinction made that the Castle Doctrine would empower American citizens to protect their home. But stand your ground said,

2

"You know what, the castle is your entire world 3 now. The castle is the movie theater, the castle 4 is your child's school."

10

11

There was a Broward County case where a kid got arrested for assault and battery and the
-- I think it was in the Fourth Judicial Circuit, the case was overturned because of stand your ground. And so the reality is, it's irresponsible law. Self-defense is great, stand your ground is not.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. We're going to move on to Commissioner Kirsanow followed by Commissioner Kladney.

15

Commissioner Kirsanow, are you there?

16

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: I am. I'm here.
Thank you very much. Can you hear me okay?

18

19

21

22

23

25

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Okay. I think that the impetus for this hearing largely was the Trayvon Martin case. And I just want to be sure that we have on the record at least if one of the witnesses is aware of this and I'm not sure which one might be aware of it, but, Mr. Rutherford, do you know whether or not Trayvon Martin invoked

2 stand your ground defense?

3

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: George

4

Zimmerman. My understanding is he did not invoke 5 that, although --

6

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: I'm sorry, 7

George Zimmerman.

8

9 law enforcement would have known about the 10 existence of it. My understanding is that George 11

Zimmerman did not invoke it, no.

12

SENATOR SMITH: Can I answer that? Can 13

14

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Was it part of 15 the charge to the jury?

16

17

SENATOR SMITH: There were two -- if I can chime in. There's two -- there's two things 19 of the stand your ground. There's the procedural 20 aspect of stand your ground which is invoking it 21 and having the procedural hearing in front of a 22 judge to invoke stand your ground.

18

23

George Zimmerman did not avail himself

24 of that procedural aspect of stand your ground.

25

But when you talk in Florida stand your ground is 2 self-defense. And within the jury instruction 3 that was used by George Zimmerman's case and any 4 other self-defense case in Florida there's no 5 separation between stand your ground and 6 self-defense.

7 And so although he did not avail himself 8 of the procedural aspect of stand your ground, he 9 certainly availed himself of the substantive 10 aspect of stand your ground. It was used in the 11 Trayvon Martin case.

12 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Second, I'd like 13 to ask in terms of there's been a lot of 14 discussion about, you know, someone shooting 15 straight, or shooting recklessly, or shooting 16 negligently, I guess I'll pose this to 17 Mr. Rutherford who sounds a little bit like me. I 18 hope for your sake very sincerely Mr. Rutherford 19 that you don't look like me.

20 But the -- well, let me put it this way.
21 I live -- I'm a black male living in what is 22 generally considered in Cleveland a high crime 23 neighborhood. And in the last, I'd say, three 24 decades I've probably been in situations three, 25 possibly four times where I could have invoked if

2 black male living in Cleveland, I'm a black male 3 living in South Carolina. And I have not had the 4 -- and fortunately, had to defend myself anytime 5 recently. But I would suggest that anyone that 6 does is simply acting on common sense and 7 self-defense and still faced with the test of 8 reasonableness. Reasonableness does not go out of 9 the window based on stand your ground.

10 And there are a number of cases where 11 people have tried to use stand your ground 12 procedurally and been turned down from doing so.

13 Stand your ground was used as a jury 14 charge in the George Zimmerman case, but it was 15 used to say that he did not have a duty to retreat 16 outside of his home.

17 But, again, I ask who among us asserts 18 that you should have to retreat outside of your 19 home. Why are we encouraging thugs to approach 20 people and telling people that they have a duty to 21 retreat before they act on it.

22 Why are we saying that people must run, 23 retreat, turn your back. It was stated in Florida 24 it said "safely retreat." That was not the law in 25 South Carolina, it was retreat. And in many other

2 places where stand your ground was passed.

3 What we are saying is that you have a -- 4 an opportunity and a duty to defend yourself, to 5 defend others, and in acting on that you will not 6 be prosecuted. You will receive procedurally 7 immunity from prosecution.

8 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Thank you. And 9 one last question. I heard, and I didn't know 10 which witness that it was, indicate that the U.N.
11 Human Rights Commission found stand your ground 12 incompatible with the notion of right to life.

13 Did I hear that correctly?

14 MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Yep, that's 15 correct.

16 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Whoever 17 testified to that do you know when the Human 18 Rights Commission -- the U.N. Human Rights 19 Commission made that statement?

20 MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Yep, 21 absolutely. It was during the review of the 22 ICCPR. It was held in March of 2014.

23 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: So this would be 24 the same Human Rights Commission that has those 25 human rights and pro-life exemplars such as

2

Russia, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Libya, Syria, and

3

Uganda, correct?

4

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Could you

5 repeat the question, please?

6

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Is this the same

7

U.N. Human Rights Commission that has the human rights exemplars on the commission such as Russia, 9

8

Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Libya, Syria, and Uganda?

10

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: Are you

11 asking if those are the people that sit on the 12 committee or are those the people -- 13

COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Yes.

14

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: No, I believe

15 the committee was made up of, you know, Israel -- 16 several other states, but I don't remember Russia

17 being one of them, but it was several nations. I believe also that information could be found 19 online.

18

20

21

Thank you.

22

23

Commissioner Kirsanow.

24

Commissioner Kladney.

25

COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Thank you,

2 Mr. Chairman. My -- my question seems to revolve 3 around procedure -- due process. I don't -- I 4 don't understand this -- I think it's 5 Representative Rutherford who's talking about 6 people shouldn't have to be arrested.

7 Well, in process today in criminal law
8 police don't have to arrest anybody. They can 9 investigate. They can turn their information over 10 to the district attorney. The district attorney 11 can decide whether to charge or not. And at least 12 that's the process in my jurisdiction, it may not 13 be that way in South Carolina.

14 But it seems to me -- and I think this 15 is a question for the entire panel. That when you 16 put a police officer who is trained to be an 17 investigator, not a decision maker, in charge of 18 making a decision, then his investigation, once he 19 makes that decision in his mind is all angled 20 toward that decision that he has made. And 21 therefore, I assume when you have this immunity 22 hearing he is going to be on the witness stand 23 defending his decision, where in the past the 24 police officer -- the neutral, would come to court 25 in a preliminary hearing, which I assume would be akin to an immunity hearing. And a neutral judge

2

3 would make a decision as to whether there was probable cause or there was self-defense.

5

Although I do understand that many 6 criminal defendants refuse to provide -- at any 7 case, in a preliminary hearing.

8

So if someone -- if you all could 9 discuss this kind of aspect to -- in relationship

10 to the law I would appreciate it. Try and 11 enlighten me a little.

12

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: In South

13

Carolina you are -- a preliminary hearing, where a 14 hearing is determined -- is held to determine 15 whether the case proceeds to the grand jury is not 16 a right and can be taken away by a prosecutor who 17 simply seeks to indict.

18

At a preliminary hearing in South

19

Carolina a defendant is not avail -- he cannot 20 put up any evidence it is only put on by the 21 state.

22

And a law enforcement officer who 23 arrests someone unlawfully should be sued. A law

24 enforcement officer that arrests someone who 25 should not have been detained or arrested should 2 be sued anyway.

3 I think this statute only makes it 4 clear -- it does that in Florida, it doesn't 5 necessarily do that in South Carolina.

6 But, again, procedurally, what this does 7 is allow someone, in my cases, African American 8 males to avail themselves of the judicial system 9 in front of a general sessions judge, what people 10 on the street would call a big court judge. I 11 don't know if they're Supreme Court judges or 12 circuit court judges in Florida. But they would 13 be a general sessions judge who has the ability to 14 give them immunity. Taking that decision solely 15 away from law enforcement where it has -- where it 16 was invested all up until this point. There's no 17 one that can tell me --

18 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: But, but, you're 19 the one who says that the old self-defense law was 20 -- it was case law, it was all over the place.

21 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: In South
22 Carolina, yes.

23 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: When in fact I
24 would assume that you had jury instructions 25 explaining exactly what the elements of self-defense were.

2

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

25

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: If you did not meet with the elements of self-defense in South Carolina you did not get a jury charge to that effect.

So a judge had to determine that you could even -- that he would even give that charge before he would do so.

COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: So -- excuse me. So what's -- where does stand your ground then become different than self-defense? If it is different from self-defense outside of procedurally, explain it to me.

I mean, you have to be in fear of harm --

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Outside --

COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: -- you get to defend yourself. And the charge to the jury is the definition of the law.

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Right. Procedurally self-defense differs from stand your ground because stand your ground is going to give you an immunity hearing. So procedurally it differs that way.

2 Outside of that it differs because it
3 takes the common law doctrine, the common law 4 Castle Doctrine and extends that to wherever you 5 may be. You never had a right to -- you never had 6 a duty to retreat in your home. Now that duty to 7 retreat goes away when you're outside of your home 8 as well. It says that you have the right to live 9 unmolested.

10 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: So you -- you 11 really are saying if someone starts angering me 12 and I get angry and I throw a punch, he can take a 13 gun out and shoot me. Is that correct?

14 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I'm saying 15 that if someone angers you --

16 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Is that correct, 17 yes or no? Yes or no, sir? Yes or no, if I throw 18 a punch at someone can they take a gun out and 19 shoot me?

20 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes. You 21 should not throw a punch at someone.

22 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Thank you.
23 That's fine. Thank you.

24 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Yes. The 25 general assembly has consistently found in states

2 where they've enacted this that you should have a 3 right to live unmolested. That you should have a 4 right to expect to be left alone with your home, 5 your business, and your vehicle, and wherever you 6 may stand. And this assertion that you should be 7 able to walk around, whether it's a commissioner 8 or anybody else, punching people in the face 9 without the -- without them having the ability to 10 defend themselves, to me, just does not make 11 sense. We negate the fact that --

12 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: -- you've never 13 been in an alcohol-fueled situation and you've 14 never seen a fight occur like that?

15 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I've never 16 been in a what?

17 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Alcohol-fueled 18 situation where alcohol is driving the parties?

19 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: I don't 20 drink, but I have been in a number of situations 21 where people were fueled by alcohol and doing 22 wrong.

23 In South Carolina we also allow you to 24 carry your gun into a bar if --the bar owner 25 does not put up a sign and prohibit you from doing

2 so.

3 However, in doing that we mandate that 4 concealed weapons permit holders that are going 5 into a bar can have absolutely no alcohol. So if 6 a concealed weapons permit holder in South 7 Carolina was in a bar and had a weapon on them and 8 was, as in your scenario, punched in the face, 9 would they have a right to defend themselves?
10 Absolutely.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: But if the gun's 12 concealed --

13 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Would anyone else
14 on the panel like to comment --

15 REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: -- the bar
16 owner would have a sign on the door saying "No 17 concealed weapon permits allowed." And the 18 concealed weapons permit holder has a duty -- 19 having a concealed weapons permit must check the 20 sign on the door before he goes in.

21 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Here's what I'm 22 going to do. We're technically out of time, but I 23 want to -- two commissioners -- Commissioner 24 Kladney you need to wrap it up, I've got two 25 commissioners who want to ask two brief questions,

2

Yaki and Narasaki.

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

25

So Commissioner Kladney if you could just finish your questioning and then I'll go to Commissioner Yaki and then Commissioner Narasaki and then we'll conclude the panel.

COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: I would just -- Mr. Chairman, I'd just like to let the other panelists comment on Representative Rutherford and my question if they could do so briefly.

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: This is Ahmad Abuznaid. I would just like to say that the issue here isn't concealed carry permits, the fact of the matter is even without that provision requiring concealed carry permit holders to not drink alcohol the gentleman could just step outside of the bar and then unload a clip into, you know, whatever person he was deemed afraid of.

So I think that, you know, we can get lost in discussing permits and whatnot, but the issue here is stand your ground and the fact that it's unreasonable.

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: That would be neither stand your ground nor self-defense. You cannot walk out and shoot --

2

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: But --

3

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: -- that would 4 not be stand your ground.

5

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: -- but if the 6 altercation spilled out to the exterior of the bar

7 and you were in fear of your life -- 8

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: -- if you're 9 still getting beat up and assaulted outside of a 10 bar, from the inside all the way to the outside, 11

you should probably defend yourself.

12

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: But also 13 stand your ground doesn't require that you're beat 14 up. So the gentleman could be walking towards 15 your direction yelling obscenities at you -- 16

REPRESENTATIVE RUTHERFORD: Why is it 17 that we are required --

18

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Yaki

19 has a question and then we'll go to Commissioner

20

Narasaki and conclude the panel. Thank you.

21

22

COMMISSIONER YAKI: Yes, thank you very 23 much. I remain -- I guess I remain troubled by 24 some of what has been said here today. I don't think -- I think we do actually have an obligation

25

2 to nickel-and-dime some of these statutes because 3 we're here because Trayvon Martin and Jordan Davis 4 were victims of these statutes and those people 5 were not nickel-and-dimed.

6 I'm not going to ask a question I'm just 7 going to make a very brief statement.

8 Mr. Rutherford, I appreciate your passion. I 9 understand that you believe that what you're doing 10 is in the best interest of African Americans who 11 live in fear of walking the streets. But what we 12 have here is data that shows that in all states 13 that have stand your ground homicide rates go up 14 rather than go down.

15 The data shows that if you are an 16 African American claiming stand your ground 17 defense you are much less likely to get it granted 18 than if you are a white person claiming it and if 19 your victim is black.

20 You talked about whether or not Trayvon 21 Martin would be able to have used that, but 22 Trayvon Martin is dead. And he was not able to 23 say "I was acting in self-defense," when George 24 Zimmerman approached him.

25 The problem with all this is that people

2 are dying. More people are dying than would have 3 died before. In your situation that you talked 4 about if someone throws a punch at me I have the 5 right, according to you, to take out a gun and 6 shoot him.

7 Now if the person -- if I think the 8 person's gonna throw a punch at me I have the 9 right to take out a gun and shoot him. If I -- if 10 the person threw a punch at me and missed and we 11 walk outside and I see him walking toward me I can 12 take out my gun and shoot him.

13 In all of these cases someone gets hurt, 14 someone dies. And you're essentially giving 15 someone who is not trained like a police officer, 16 as Mr. Kladney was saying. Does not understand 17 how to judge a situation, has not taken 18 proficiency courses in shooting so as to minimize 19 casualties to civilians, and yes, you're right, 20 cops do sometimes miss and they shoot the wrong 21 people. But for the most part they're trained, 22 and we have an expectation that they should be 23 trained to not sort of spray their gun anywhere.

24 And you're essentially giving ordinary 25 citizens the right to draw and fire wherever they

2 may be at any specific place and time.

3 That's the problem with stand your 4 ground is that the castle is no longer the castle.
5 The question of reasonableness when someone breaks 6 into your house is a lot different than when 7 you're in an open theater or in an auditorium such 8 as this, the judgments are a lot different and 9 the result is that someone dies.

10 And the stats show people die. More 11 people are dying -- more people are dying because 12 of this. And as great as you are as an attorney 13 and as expensive as you are of an attorney -- even 14 though you forgot your tie today -- to, you know, 15 in terms of defending people who you believe were 16 asserting their rights -- and I agree that they 17 should be able to assert their rights if it was 18 self-defense. Stand your ground is different from 19 self-defense because the way it works, the way -- 20 the situation in which it occurs, the environment 21 in which it happens is much different than if 22 you're inside your home or if you're in absolute 23 imminent fear of someone else taking a gun at you 24 and the gun is out there and you have to do 25 something.

2 Those are the exceptions that prove the 3 rule of the old common sense Castle Doctrine. But 4 stand your ground takes that and perverts that to 5 an extent that I am concerned about. And 6 especially for African Americans who do not get 7 the benefit of it as white defendants do. Who are 8 the victims of it more than whites are. I think 9 those are the things that I'm concerned about.

10 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
11 Commissioner Yaki.

12 Commissioner Narasaki, you have the last 13 question.

14 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Thank you.

15 I just really want to thank all of the 16 panelists for the discussion, it's been very 17 illuminating. And it's clearly a very passionate 18 subject for everyone.

19 So my understanding, and I appreciate 20 Commissioner Heriot's efforts to try to untangle 21 the issue of how stand your ground is different 22 from the Castle Doctrine. I want to make sure I 23 understand it correctly.

24 So my I understanding is (A), that it 25 gives you more leeway to escalate, it doesn't

2 require equal force, but you can more quickly 3 escalate.

4 (B), you don't have to be in your home
5 or in the vicinity of your home so that makes it 6 more likely that innocent bystanders, in fact, 7 will be around and more likely to therefore be 8 collateral damage.

9 Three, my understanding is that there is 10 more subjectivity to the fear that's allowed.
11 That it's not a reasonable person standard. But 12 in the case of -- so there was a case of a guy who 13 shot a Chinese American neighbor. The Chinese 14 American neighbor was actually going to his own 15 home next door. And the guy who shot him said, 16 "Well, I was in fear of my life because all 17 Chinese know Karate and can kill me."

18 So that would be his subjective fear.
19 But I hope most of us would not think that was a 20 reasonable person's standard -- meet that 21 standard.

22 So if this is all -- so I want to (A), 23 ask Mr. Abuznaid, is this a correct understanding?

24 And (B), the argument seems to be 25 because we're here -- the reason the commission is looking at this is because there's a question 3 about equal protection under the law and whether 4 in fact these laws are victimizing African 5

1

2

Americans, are being applied differently in a way that hurts minority communities.

6

7

But the argument that seems to be being made by some is that in fact it is helping African 9

8

Americans, so I want to know since you are clearly 10 not in support of the law where -- how -- where's 11 the conflict in that?

12

How is it that it helps -- does it help

13 enough to change your mind?

14

MR. AHMAD NABIL ABUZNAID: So to your 15 first question, that list did seem accurate. And 16

I would just add in addition that stand your 17 ground eliminated the duty to safely retreat, 18 which is what we had in Florida. And I think for 19 people that had issues with self-defense that would have been the change that I would have 21 advocated for, just simply require someone to 22 safely retreat if possible.

20

23

To your second question I think, you 24 know, with everything going on in Ferguson, with 25 everything going on in the State of Florida, young

2 black and brown men and women don't feel safe.
3 Now whether that is because of police brutality 4 and excessive force, or vigilantes, or people like 5 Michael Dunn who don't like thug or quote-unquote 6 "thug music," which is hip hop.

7 People are being subjected to being 8 threats of society when they really just want to 9 live. They really just want to prosper peacefully 10 in their communities. Trayvon Martin was walking 11 to his father's home. I mean, if we are to accept 12 that in any day in today's society a kid can get 13 gunned down walking to his father's home simply 14 because another man has the right to stand his 15 ground, I think we've lost all faith in our 16 society.

17 I think that, you know, the example was 18 drawn up by the commission member about being 19 punched in the face, now, what would you teach 20 your child is what I would implore folks to think 21 about. Would you teach your child to punch back 22 or to fire their gun off? Or do you teach your 23 child, "You know what the person that punched you 24 was wrong, we're a society that does not condone 25 violence, we condemn it. And we'd like to have a peaceful society."

Now maybe that's Utopian and could not exist, but I -- I just say that we've seen it now -- bubble into our schools. People are in fear of their lives and they deserve better and we should do better.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you, gentlemen for a very engaging panel, we appreciate it. We went over a little time, but it was very informative.

Yes, Senator.

SENATOR SMITH: Mr. Chair, just two quick things if I can --

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Quickly.

SENATOR SMITH: -- very brief. Commissioner Heriot brought up a great point, there is a thin line between stand your ground and common law self-defense and we're getting blurred in that line.

My only point would be that with the invocation of stand your ground and cases that subsequent -- you're going to see more and more of these cases. Between 2005 and Trayvon Martin there are very few cases. But now people have in their mind, at least in Florida, that they have 3 this great "get out of jail free card." So we're 4 working towards stopping what's coming not what 5 has happened.

6

And lastly, the point that was made 7 earlier about data collection and if that's 8 something that you can address that would be 9 tremendous, of maybe requiring these states to do 10 data collection. Although I want other changes to 11 stand your ground, but God bless you if you can 12 get states to at least keep the data and that will 13 help your job and my job as we go forward.

14

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you, 15 Senator. That will be an excellent 16 recommendation.

Thank you all and we appreciate your 18 time. So as this panel cycles off we ask panel 19 two to begin to come forward.

20

Commissioners will take a five minute

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: If we can get the commissioners to come back up to the podium, please.

Okay. I'm going to call the second panel to order. Let me briefly introduce the panelist's in the order in which they will speak.

Our first panelist is David Harris, Law Professor at the University of Pittsburgh.

Our second panelist is William Krouse from the Congressional Research Service.

Our third panelist is John Roman of The Urban Institute.

Our fourth panelist is Arkadi Gerney of the Center for American Progress.

Our fifth panelist is Benjamin Crump -- who is just taking his seat now -- attorney for Trayvon Martin, Jordan Davis, and the Michael Brown families.

And our sixth and final panelist is Katheryn Russel-Brown, Law Professor at the University of Florida Law School.

I will now ask each panelist to swear or affirm that the information that you are about to provide to us is true and accurate to the best of your knowledge and belief. Is that correct?

1

4

5

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. As you know you'll have eight minutes, each of you. So Professor Harris, please proceed.

8

MR. DAVID HARRIS: Thank you very much.

9

10

I want to tell the commission I appreciate you having this hearing. And appreciate your invitation.

12

Stand your ground laws are the most far reaching changes we have had to self-defense law in this country in many, many decades.

15

The bottom line for these laws is that they lower the potential legal cost of using deadly force. There's a lot of talk already about the empirical evidence and there will be more. I won't go into that right now.

20

I've been asked to come here to talk about implicit bias, which was mentioned earlier by Commissioner Yaki and some others.

23

I want to ask what role, if any, would implicit bias have in magnifying, changing, focusing, the effect of stand your ground laws?

2 Unconscious, unintended, but very real bias, how 3 would that play into stand your ground laws in 4 practice?

5 Let's first start by defining implicit 6 bias. When we think about racism, typically, we 7 think about, sort of, the old school, in your 8 face, calling names sort of racism. But the last 9 20 years of research into the way people think has 10 really changed the whole way that we should be 11 thinking about racism as well.

12 What this has told us, this research 13 over the last 20 years, is that what scientists 14 call "implicit bias" is actually far more common 15 than any kind of old school sort of racism.

16 When we talk about implicit biases, what 17 we are talking about is unconscious favorability 18 or favoritism towards whites and a negative 19 feeling toward blacks, just to use the same binary 20 that we've been using here all morning.

21 It is unconscious, these biases are not 22 known to the people in whom they operate. They 23 operate and exist even in people who have 24 perfectly strong egalitarian conscious beliefs and 25 would articulate them to you.

2 They operate without the knowledge of 3 those who have them and they do -- they can affect 4 actions.

5 So how do we know this? I'll tell you 6 just a little bit about it, try to put it in a 7 nutshell. We've been -- there's a lot of research 8 on this subject, but by far the most prominent 9 research involves a test called "The Implicit 10 Association Test" or IAT.

11 This test involves a use of a computer 12 and the viewing of partial pictures of faces along 13 with positive words and negative words.

14 When I say "partial pictures of faces," 15 I do have a little sample here. I've got copies 16 -- I'm sort of old school myself, so no PowerPoint 17 on this I'm afraid. I'll be glad to pass them 18 around.

19 You can see it's from the base of the 20 forehead, the eyes, the nose, and just below the 21 nose. It's enough of the face so that it's 22 clearly recognizable whether the person being 23 pictured is either African American or European 24 American.

25 What happens here is that test takers

2 see on the screen, they see a face and a word and 3 they are asked to make associations by clicking on 4 a computer key. It's really not that complicated.
5 At first they are -- please -- at first they are 6 asked to associate a white face with a positive 7 word or concept. And a black face with a negative 8 word or concept.

9 And when they click the computer is 10 measuring the speed at which they click and the 11 differences might be in milliseconds, but a 12 computer is perfectly capable of measuring things 13 at that level.

14 They are then asked, the test takers 15 are, to click when you have an association between 16 a white face and a negative concept, a black face 17 and a positive concept.

18 After all of the clicking and testing is 19 done what you end up with is sort of a measurement 20 of the strength of associations in this particular 21 person's thinking.

22 The test has been taken by millions of 23 people. I think the last thing that I read was 13 24 or 14 million. You can take it online. I have.
25 And your data is used as part of the overall

2 results. You are asked for demographic data about 3 yourself, but you are not identified.

4 The results are that you get a 5 measurement of the test taker's thinking. Does it 6 take the test taker longer to click on 7 associations between black and positive words than 8 it does white and negative words, and vice-versa.

9 And it produces a measurement of the 10 degree of bias that a person has toward whites, 11 toward blacks, positive or negative.

12 The results of these tests -- this 13 testing I think always surprises people a little 14 bit -- before they've heard of it before.

15 75 percent of all test takers over these 16 millions of tests taken exhibit a bias to one 17 degree or another against blacks and for whites.
18 It is -- this bias toward whites, against blacks 19 shows up in 88 percent of all white test takers.
20 But, also, interestingly in about 40 percent of 21 all African American test takers.

22 Now this does not mean, I want to be 23 clear. This does not mean that racism is somehow 24 excused because it's unconscious. It does not 25 mean that because everyone shares these

2 characteristics, it's fine. Or that the victims 3 are somehow to blame for racist treatment. And it 4 certainly does not mean that the impact of 5 whatever racist treatment there might be is any 6 less because it comes from an unconscious place.

7 What it does mean is that racial biases 8 need to be understood as being much more common 9 and found in many more people than we used to 10 think. Even if they're unaware of it the effects 11 can be the same.

12 Now let's talk briefly about effects in 13 the remaining time. Can this affect conduct, and 14 especially within the context of something like a 15 stand your ground law. And the answer to it is, 16 yes. Even though these biases are unconscious 17 they operate.

18 Implicit -- excuse me. Implicit bias, 19 the research on this ties neatly into work done by 20 social psychologist's about what are called 21 heuristics. Heuristics is just a fancy word for 22 rules of thumb. We all use rules of thumb and in 23 psychology the researchers think of this as ways 24 to make quick decisions. Have a rule that allows 25 you to make very quick decisions in an environment

2 with very low information at a very high rate of 3 speed and to preserve your cognitive resources.
4 So we use heuristics all of the time to make 5 decisions as human beings.

6 When you combine the idea that there is 7 implicit bias and heuristics -- what some of the 8 research has shown -- especially research by 9 Philip Atiba Goff of UCLA, is what he has called 10 the "suspicion heuristic." You have a negative 11 view of blacks for the most part, implicit. This 12 leads to beliefs that blacks are prone to 13 criminality. That they are violent. And there is 14 a lot of other research besides Mr. Goff's that 15 goes in this same direction.

16 So what you get is an automatic very 17 rapid association between blacks, that is not just 18 about negativeness, but also about violence and 19 criminality.

20 Now in the specific context of stand 21 your ground laws what this will mean is that more 22 people will think of black people they meet as 23 dangerous, as criminal, and as violent. And that 24 is going to result in more blacks being the 25 victims in stand your ground shootings. It also has the other effect of when a white person or 3 somebody goes to court and says, "I stood my 4 ground," and the victim is black, the jury 5 harboring those very same biases will be more 6 inclined to acquit when the victim is black.

2

7

Thank you very much for your time. I 8 look forward to your questions.

9

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. Krouse, you're 10 next.

11

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Thank you for 12 having me. I have the privilege to work as the 13

14

Service housed within the Library of Congress.

15

CRS provides nonpartisan research to Congress.

16

I need to make a small disclaimer here.

17

The views, ideas, and the information that I'm 18 about to present are my own and cannot be 19 attributed back to the Library of Congress or CRS.

20

21 that. Thank you.

22

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Thank you. Also

23 this live presentation is not in any way intended to be an evaluation of stand your ground laws.

24

25

Rather what I'm about to present to you are some 2 very basic baseline statistics. We have data on 3 murder and non-negligent homicides and also on the 4 justifiable homicides.

5 The data are imperfect and are 6 incomplete, but it does tell us some things and it 7 cannot be ignored. So I want to discuss briefly 8 data limitations and definitions and then murder 9 and then justifiable homicides. And I want to 10 stress that this is principally about justifiable 11 homicides by private citizens and not law 12 enforcement officers, also I may give you some 13 preliminary data on both. And then I want to look 14 at interracial and intraracial justifiable 15 homicides that involve blacks and whites.

16 So my two data sources are the Uniform 17 Crime Reports, the FBI vets this data every year 18 and publishes it in the Uniform Crime Reports or 19 Crime in the United States. It's available on the 20 FBI website.

21 Whenever they get a report on a homicide 22 they also go back to the state and local reporting 23 agencies and ask for supplementary information on 24 those homicides and that's published in the 25 supplementary homicide reports.

That information isn't -- isn't available as the Uniform Crime Reports, however, but through the efforts of certain academics it has been - FOIA'd and it's available on the University of Michigan Website.

The Supplementary Homicide Reports suffer from certain very serious limitations. One, Florida does not report in a manner that is accepted by the FBI. I think it has to do with a technicality on the offender/victim relationship, familial relationship. And it's just on that point alone according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics that the data is not compatible. So that seems to me something that could be fixed possibly.

Other states and localities more importantly do not participate, do not participate fully, and/or only participate intermittently in this Supplementary Homicides Reports Program.

Making things more difficult these reports do not always reflect the final disposition of these cases. Like the UCR, federal and travel (phonetic) law enforcements do not report to the -- Supplementary Homicides Report

2 Program.

3 So I just wanted to give you the 4 definitions here. I have one slight mistake here, 5 it should be instead of "murder and non-negligent 6 manslaughter" it should be "non-negligent 7 homicide." At the time I was preparing these -- 8 these slides there was a good deal of debate about 9 what exactly non-negligent manslaughter meant or 10 non-negligent homicide.

11 A non-negligent homicide will be a 12 homicide that's not accidental, it's the willful 13 killing of another human being. And then 14 justifiable homicides by a police officer, will be 15 a killing done in the line of duty. And then for 16 private citizen it would be the killing of a felon 17 during the commission of a felony.

18 That's the FBI definition. And so what 19 I'm about to tell you is that when you look at 20 these cases, case by case, you can often make 21 distinctions of your own on whether these 22 definitions would fully meet those cases or not.

23 In the UCR, the justifiable homicides 24 are tabulated separately from murder and 25 non-negligent homicides. So they're two -- in two

2 different data presentations. However, in the 3 Supplementary Homicide Reports it's all merged 4 together but it's coded so that you can separate 5 them out.

6 So I'm presenting this graph here just 7 to give us the big picture backdrop on murder and 8 non-negligent homicide victim rates. As we can 9 see we had some bumps in the '70s, '80s, and '90s.
10 And then violent crime in murder and firearm 11 related murders trailed off with a couple of bumps 12 in the 2000's.

13 Then I give you the raw data as 14 published by the FBI and Justifiable Homicides.
15 One would think that law enforcement agencies 16 reporting on these matters would be fairly 17 reliable. And it also has it by weapon.

18 We're less confident about the 19 reliability of the data for justifiable homicides 20 as reported by law enforcement agencies, by 21 private citizen. However I want to say that the 22 data that I'm about to present to you on 23 justifiable homicides involving blacks and whites 24 with firearms consists of about 80 to 90 percent 25 of the incidents that are included in this table.

2 So just for comparison sake I thought 3 I'd line up justifiable homicides with murders and 4 non-negligent homicides. And this is for 1987
5 through 2011, you can see that they trended 6 somewhat similarly in the first part of that time 7 period. And then when the murders trailed off the 8 justifiable homicides continued to go up.

9 It has been suggested to me that this 10 one possibility could be, that this is more 11 zealous reporting by law enforcement. And so I 12 just gave it for the shorter time period which is 13 covered more recently with regards to the stand 14 your ground laws.

15 And notice how the bumps in the murders 16 go up tremendously when you shorten your time 17 period. But, again, the justifiable homicides in 18 either category continue to go up.

19 And then these are murders. We can see 20 that most murders are intra -- intraracial when 21 they involve blacks and whites. And that in a 22 small number of cases they're interracial. And 23 these are the justifiable homicides with firearms 24 involving blacks and/or whites. And we can see 25 that blacks and whites avail themselves of

2 justifiable homicide almost on -- in equal 3 numbers.

4

However, in white-on-black incidents

5

it's a ratio of about 6 to 1, to black-on-white 6 justifiable homicides. That ratio remains about 7 the same, this is the stranger on stranger murders

8 in this slide. And when we look at the ratio of 9 justifiable homicides, white-on-black versus 10 black-on-white, that ratio stays about the same at 11

6 to 1.

12

And we're looking at in any given year

13 white-on-black justifiable homicide incidents they 14 range about from 25 to 30 with a slight increase in the latter five year period.

15

16

So -- and we see again the cluster of 17 white-on-black along with black-on-black and 18 white-on-white justifiable homicides there.

19

So I wanted to sum this up by saying 20 that if you go to Gary Kleck in Point Blank, he 21 estimates that we under-report justifiable

22 homicides by private citizens by about two, three,

23

maybe four-fold. So you're looking at, over this 24

10 year period, about 250 cases or 25 cases a year of white-on-black justifiable homicides.

25

2 And in the interest of determining what 3 sort of circumstances are going on here I would 4 suggest that you might want to look at each one of 5 those cases on a case by case basis. But if you 6 were to look at comprehensive data you might be 7 looking at anywhere between 50, 75, to 100 cases 8 per year. So if you did it for a 10 year period 9 that'd be a thousand cases.

10 I have 10 seconds left and I just want 11 to --

12 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: You've gone over, 13 but it's all right. Just wrap it up real quickly.

14 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Okay. The 15 Supplementary Homicide Reports data is available 16 as I said on the University of Michigan website.
17 And that concludes my presentation. Thank you.

18 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
19 Mr. Krouse.

20 Mr. Roman, you have the floor.

21 MR. JOHN ROMAN: Thank you very much. I 22 want to thank the commission for accepting my 23 testimony today. I want to apologize to the 24 commission that my tie did not make it down here 25 with me --

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: What is it with the ties -- is there a tie thief around here?

6

MR. JOHN ROMAN: -- I apologize for the lack of decorum. And the ties in the lobby by the way are totally inappropriate.

10

11

So I work for The Urban Institute which is a non-partisan non-profit social and economic policy research organization. We were founded in the '60s to try and add evidence to debates about important social welfare questions.

14

15

16

17

18

I've worked in the crime and justice center at The Urban Institute since -- for 17 years. So this is exactly the kind of issue that we would like to weigh in on and bring data to the question to see if we can facilitate a better understanding of what we're trying to accomplish here.

19 20 21

23

I'm going to talk about the same data that Bill talked about, we used it in our analysis, so I thank you very much for using four minutes of your testimony that I don't have to explain what the data are.

25

But, I want to -- I want to make a point before I get into our analysis, which we did a

2 couple of years ago, and that we've revisited a 3 couple of times since then and it seems to be very 4 stable and shows some of the things -- many of the 5 things that Bill suggests.

6 And that -- that is the idea here that I 7 think is under-reported, which is that the goal of 8 a stand your ground law is to solve a social 9 problem. And the social problem it portends to 10 solve is that people are getting convicted for 11 killing people when they were actually acting in 12 self-defense.

13 There is no evidence to support the idea 14 that that is actually ongoing. If you look at the 15 exoneration literature you cannot find -- you 16 might be able to find a couple of cases where 17 somebody has been exonerated when they act in 18 self-defense, but that's not why people are 19 wrongfully convicted, they're wrongfully convicted 20 for lots of other reasons.

21 So we set out to solve a problem that we 22 don't even have any evidence was ever a problem to 23 solve. So our first question of the day is, does 24 stand your ground achieve its objective? Do more 25 people who commit a crime are they found to have been justified in committing that homicide?

2

5

6

7

8 9 10

11 12

13 14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23

25

So we asked that question. And then we asked the question, is there an unintended consequence of these laws that people who act in self-defense or found to have acted as justifiably, ah, committing homicide, if there's racial discrepancies in the rates at which those justifiable homicide findings occur.

And then we want to ask if there are characteristics of people that differentiate them. Characteristics of the case that differentiate them with respect to the finding that a homicide is justifiable.

And I just want to make a couple of comments on the Supplementary Homicide Data. We used the same data that Bill talked about, 2005 to 2010, is our primary report. We've revisited it since then and added new data as it's become available and the findings don't really vary that much. So the one that we've documented the best is the 2012 studies. And that's what I want to talk about today.

In the 2005 to 2010 study there were 83,000 homicides in that six year period. In 2 order to say anything about the race of the victim 3 and the race of the offender, of course we have to 4 know something about the offender. And we don't 5 always know who did it so we can't always say 6 that, so we end up with the data set of about 7 53,000 people.

8 The Supplementary Homicide Data are 9 limited in some important ways that are worth 10 discussing. One is that, like Bill said, we have 11 to rely on how local law enforcement codes these 12 things and we have no way to independently 13 validate whether what they've -- the decisions 14 that they've made before a verdict occurs are 15 accurate or not. So we sort of have to trust 16 them.

17 There's a lot of missing data like I 18 said. And then there's some very important 19 caveats to be made about context that I want to 20 revisit at the end, which will be in four minutes.

21 So what we find is that in two and a 22 half percent of cases where there's a homicide, 23 the homicide is ruled to be justified. One 24 comment I do want to make is when we talk about 25 white-on-white, white-on-black, black-on-white, or

2 black-on-black, I received a lot of criticism 3 about using those definitions because of course 4 Mr. Zimmerman has some Hispanic origins and people 5 said that that's an important matter. The FBI 6 data are coded according to the guidelines from 7 the census bureau and so there is no ethnicity in 8 there, there's just simply race. So he would have 9 been coded as white.

10 There are other important matters in the 11 Supplementary Homicide Report that we wanted to 12 control for when we did our more expansive 13 statistical analysis like whether a firearm was 14 used, whether there were multiple victims and 15 offenders, whether these people were strangers or 16 not, gender, age.

17 So what do we find? So -- my apologies.
18 So we find some really interesting things, so what 19 we find is -- the first question is, is stand your 20 ground effective at doing what it intends to do, 21 which is to increase the rate at which homicides 22 are ruled to be justified. And it turns out that 23 it is.

24 So the overall rate at which homicides 25 are ruled to be justified in the data that we look

2 at is two and a half percent. It's 3.7 percent in 3 stand your ground states. And 2.1 percent in 4 non-stand your ground states.

5 And I just want to make one quick caveat 6 about what I mean by a stand your ground state.
7 We looked at 6 years of data and lots of states 8 went from being a non-stand your ground state to 9 being a stand your ground state during the period 10 that we examined. We think about each year and 11 state independently.

12 So if a state is a non-stand your ground 13 state in 2005 and 2006, passes a law in 2007, in 14 those first 3 years it's in the non-stand your 15 ground grouping. And in the last 4 years it's -- 16 3 years it's in the stand your ground grouping -- 17 because I think that issue has come up when people 18 have been critical of this study.

19 Okay. And then we get into the 20 unintended consequences of whether there are 21 racial disparities that are associated with this 22 change -- whether there are racial disparities 23 with the application of the finding of justifiable 24 homicide and then whether it changes over time.

25 The first question is -- is what is the 2 rate at which black-on-black homicides are ruled 3 to be justified? It's 2.4 percent. The overall 4 average is 2.5 percent. It's no difference.

5 White-on-white it's 2.2 percent, compared to 2.5 6 percent, basically no difference.

7 In homicides where the shooter is black 8 and the victim is white, those are ruled to be 9 justified 1.2 percent of the time. In cases where 10 the shooter is white and the victim is black those 11 are ruled to be justified 11.2 percent of the 12 time. Ten times more likely if the shooter is 13 white and the victim is black, than if the shooter 14 is black and the victim is white.

15 If you look at the data before and after 16 a state becomes a stand your ground state you see 17 those same discrepancies. You see white-on-black 18 homicides are justified 9.5 percent of the time.
19 And black-on-white homicides are justified 1.1 20 percent of the time.

21 After a state becomes a stand your 22 ground state the disparity gets even bigger.
23 Black-on-white homicides are ruled to be justified 24 at about the same rate they were in non-stand your 25 ground states, 1.4 percent compared to 1.1.

White-on-black homicides are ruled to be justified 16.8 percent of the time, where they were 9 percent before.

So I just want to say that we ran a bunch of really complicated statistical analyses that I won't bore you with to try and make sure that we weren't confusing the effects of other things like the type of firearm used, or their age, or the, you know, other things, and we find the exact same thing. When we add additional years to the data, we find the same thing.

So if -- you know, so the question on the table is, in 9 seconds is this, do these disparities -- could these disparities be explained by processes other than racial discrimination? And the answer is if you look at other racial disparities across the system is -- these disparities are so much bigger than other disparities in terms of sentencing, and death penalty, and arrest rates, and stop and frisk's that it's really hard to believe that that is true.

Thank you very much. I look forward to your questions.

2

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you, 3

4

5

MR. ARKADI GERNEY: Thank you. First of 6 all I'd just like to thank the commission for 7 having me here today and accepting my testimony.

8

My name is Arkadi Gerney, I'm with The 9

Center for American Progress, a think tank, based 10 in Washington.

11

My testimony is going to focus on the 12 intersection of stand your ground laws with lax 13 laws around concealed carrying of firearms that 14 put guns in the hands of people who have prior 15 criminal histories or run-ins with law

16 enforcement.

17

And I'm going to start by illustrating 18 one particular case.

19

In 2005 a young Florida man was -- went 20 to a bar with a friend of his. His friend was 21 arrested for underage drinking and -- and that man

22 became agitated according to police reports, and 23 pushed a police officer and was ultimately charged 24 with two felonies.

25

Those felony charges were ultimately

2 reduced and then later waived when the defendant 3 entered a court-ordered alcohol education program 4 and a court-ordered anger management class.

5 One month later he had a -- issues with 6 his fiancée and that led to another run in with 7 law enforcement. And ultimately a temporary 8 restraining order filed against this person.

9 Under federal law, had the court issued 10 a permanent domestic violence restraining order 11 this man would have been barred from purchasing or 12 possessing a firearm. But it was a temporary 13 order and in most states that is not a bar to 14 purchasing a firearm. And this man in fact did 15 purchase a firearm. And in 2009 obtained a gun 16 carry permit from the State of Florida.

17 Let's jump ahead to 2013. In 2013 this 18 same man had an incident where according to police 19 reports he threatened his estranged wife with a 20 firearm. She ultimately declined to press 21 charges. Two months later in 2013 the same man 22 was arrested and charged with felony assault for 23 pointing a shotgun at another woman, his 24 girlfriend at the time, during an argument.

25 And then just last month this same man

2 got in an argument with a driver and threatened to 3 kill him. That driver called the police, but 4 ultimately also declined to press charges.

5 This man did one other thing during this 6 period which is, on February 26, 2009 he shot and 7 killed an unarmed teenager named Trayvon Martin.

8 So George Zimmerman's history with 9 firearms, run-in's with the law, are interesting.
10 However none of these incidents resulted in a 11 criminal conviction for Mr. Zimmerman. And under 12 federal law this pattern of incidents is not 13 sufficient to bar Mr. Zimmerman from possessing 14 firearms.

15 But remarkably, none of these incidents 16 and not these incidents in their totality have 17 rendered George Zimmerman ineligible to have a 18 special license from the State of Florida to carry 19 a concealed firearm. A license that he has to 20 this day.

21 In some states the temporary restraining 22 order, the lengthy history of run-ins with the 23 law, of the shooting of Mr. Martin would have been 24 sufficient for that license to be revoked or never 25 have been issued in the first place. But not in 2 Florida.

3 So the trial -- Mr. Zimmerman and his 4 acquittal, I think leaves some -- has certainly 5 raised questions about stand your ground laws.
6 And as John, and others on this panel and the 7 panels that you'll hear before you will talk 8 about, I think, particularly two potential effects 9 of stand your ground laws. And there's a growing 10 body of evidence behind those effects, which is 11 that they seemed to increase lethality and there 12 seems to be a racially disparate impact in how 13 they're applied.

14 But this other body of law -- this body 15 of law that put the gun in Mr. Zimmerman's hands 16 in the first place, this body of law that made him 17 feel authorized to be a self-appointed armed 18 community watchman is something that demands 19 examination as well.

20 And in Florida we know that in stand 21 your ground cases 63 percent of the defendant's 22 used firearms to kill their victims. Stand your 23 ground doesn't only apply to firearms. You can 24 defend yourself under stand your ground laws or 25 claim self-defense under stand your ground laws

2 through any means, but we know from all kinds of 3 evidence that firearms increases the lethality of 4 that attempt at self-defense.

5 And we know that in Florida 1 in 3 6 people who committed a homicide using -- and used 7 the stand your ground defense had previously been 8 charged with committing a violent crime. So the 9 archetype of the good guy with the gun, which does 10 appropriately apply to most concealed carry permit 11 holders, most concealed carry permit holders do 12 not have prior run-ins with the law. Most 13 concealed carry permits do not have a record like 14 Mr. Zimmerman's, does not apply to all concealed 15 carry permit holders.

16 And different states have very, very 17 different processes for evaluating who should get 18 this special license to carry a gun.

19 In the strongest laws the states have 20 given the licensing authority, typically a local 21 law enforcement agency, very broad discretion to 22 determine based on the arrest record and other -- 23 and other indicators whether or not someone should 24 get a concealed carry permit.

25 Additionally some states provide some 1

2 limited discretion to the licensing authority to 3 issue or revoke a permit based on a certain -- 4 certain narrower categories of discretion. And 5 most states apply some additional categorical 6 prohibitions that go beyond the federal 7 prohibitions on gun possession.

8 A number of states, at least, exclude 9 people convicted of misdemeanor, crimes of 10 violence, at least, if those convictions were 11 recent. But not all states do that.

12 And what we know and -- or what I would 13 leave you with is that it's not -- you know, the 14 question before you is not whether someone should 15 have a right to self-defense. We've had that 16 right through common law for hundreds of years in 17 this country. The question before us is not 18 whether Americans should be able to get a permit 19 to carry a concealed firearm.

20 In 1980 there are 18 states had no 21 concealed carry, today all 50 states have some 22 process for issuing concealed carry permits and 23 some capacity for people to get them. All 50 24 states.

25 The question is, what should the scope

2 of the self-defense law be? Does it need to go 3 beyond the traditional scope? And who should get 4 that permit to carry a concealed gun?

5 Because when you put it together and 6 you're putting guns in the hands of people who 7 have clear -- a clear pattern and practice that 8 suggests that they may create a risk to public 9 safety, and you're reducing the threshold to use 10 lethal force, more people are going to die.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
12 Mr. Gerney.

13 Mr. Crump.

14 MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: Thank you to the 15 commission for allowing me to testify this 16 morning. And I apologize that my testimony is not 17 in PowerPoint presentation. My staff has been 18 very busy up in Ferguson, Missouri. So please 19 accept my apologies for that, but we will submit 20 the testimony that I present to you in a very 21 short fashion.

22 I want to talk as the attorney for 23 Trayvon Martin, as well as Michael Giles, two real 24 individuals. Real life individuals. Young 25 African American men who have been severely

2 affected by the stand your ground laws.

3 And I want to talk about, as an 4 attorney, the application of those laws. And I 5 want to talk about it from three frames of 6 reference.

7 Number one, from a constitutional 8 perspective. Number two, from a judicial 9 perspective. And number three, from a societal 10 perspective.

11 But I want to begin by borrowing what 12 Mr. Roman said about stand your ground, because as 13 I've said in many, many, occasions stand your 14 ground was a solution looking for a problem.
15 There was nothing wrong with self-defense. It had 16 operated for over 200 years just fine. There was 17 no need, and to this day, still there's no need 18 for the stand your ground law.

19 So we start with the constitutional 20 application of how this law has been arbitrarily 21 applied. Before the law's passage there was an 22 average of 12 justifiable killings per year.
23 Since stand your ground passed that average has 24 grown to 36. To date 32 states have passed 25 similar laws boosted by the National Rifle

2 Association and the conservative corporate backed 3 American legislative exchange counsel -- Alec 4 (phonetic).

5 Since the shooting of Trayvon Benjamin 6 Martin the law's constitutionality is being 7 questioned.

8 Now the argument is that one has the 9 right to defend oneself in the face of imminent 10 danger and is treated as constitutional in nature.
11 I, along with Miss Lucia McBath, who was supposed 12 to appear before you, have joined forces with some 13 other lawyers to bring a constitutional challenge 14 in the State of Georgia to stand your ground.

15 And what we are looking at in the 16 simplest sense of the word, is that the law is 17 unconstitutionally vague and warrants its 18 enforcement prohibited by a legal injunction.
19 Because what's at issue is what constitutes a 20 reasonable fear?

21 It is without question that the 22 determination of reasonableness of ones fear and 23 the implication of self-defense will differ an 24 application if the decedent is an unarmed, elderly 25 white woman as opposed to an unarmed young black

1

2 man, our complaint states.

3

5

6

7

8

9 And I don't want to read our whole 10 complaint, but I'm picking out parts that I think 11 are pertinent.

12

14

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23 24

25

By not defining what actions create a reasonable perception justifying the use of deadly force the act potentially deprives all of Georgia's citizens of the right to life without due process of law and contravention of the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution, as the law is so vague as to not apprise a person of common intelligence of the bowels of lawful behavior.
By creating a right to kill based upon an individuals reasonable fear without defining what circumstances would demonstrate reasonable -- the act will potentially deprive individuals of their lives without due process of the law, as reasonable is not defined there is no way for an

2 individual to comport his actions within the 3 confines of the law and that's to prevent being 4 slayed due to reasonable fear of another.

5 I submit to you ladies and gentlemen of 6 this commission, it has been longstanding in the 7 courts of America -- we go back to Bernard Goetz 8 in New York, and the People-v-Goetz, cite 68 New 9 York 2nd District. Courts around the country have 10 accepted that race of an individual is relevant 11 evidence in determining the reasonableness of a 12 claim of self-defense.

13 So what do parents, American citizens, 14 of little black and brown children tell them when 15 they are confronted with people like Bernard Goetz 16 or anybody else as it relates to the 17 reasonableness of you being a threat.

18 You better fear -- the courts have said 19 that you can -- that is a factor. And so I move 20 on to the judicial application in consideration of 21 my time.

22 Stand your ground is a pretrial motion.
23 A pretrial motion. When you look at how it was 24 applied in the Zimmerman case, they said, "We're 25 not going to argue stand your ground." We're not

2 going to bring it up -- first they said they 3 would, and then they said, "No, no, we're not 4 going to argue it." Because if it's applied the 5 way that it's supposed to be applied you bring it 6 up as a pretrial motion and it's before the trial 7 ever begins. If you win it, you win it. You go 8 home, there is no civil immunity attached to you 9 or anything, you are completely exonerated.

10 But if you lose it you cannot bring it 11 up again during the course of the trial. You 12 can't wait 'til the jury instruction and say, "Oh, 13 you have a right to stand your ground." That's 14 why it's unconstitutionally vague from a judicial 15 perspective.

16 Thirdly, and lastly, what my grandmother 17 says is, "The real life perspective of how we 18 apply these laws."

19 Trayvon Benjamin Martin didn't get the 20 benefit of stand your ground. Marissa Alexander 21 in Jacksonville, Florida who had an altercation 22 with a documented domestic violent spouse, shot 23 one of the shots in the air is facing 60 years in 24 prison.

25 Michael Giles, even more extreme. A

2 young 25 year old military officer serving his 3 country. Has served twice in the middle east, was 4 down in Tampa, Florida, came up to Tallahassee 5 visiting his college friends, there was an 6 altercation not involving him at all. The people 7 in the altercation, by their testimony, attacked 8 him. While he was being hit and kicked he pulled 9 the licensed gun that he had a permit to carry, 10 shot him in the leg. Glazed his leg, the gentleman 11 was out the next day. He's says, "Stand your 12 ground it doesn't work for black people." He was 13 sentenced to 25 years in prison.

14 Because of time I don't have the 15 opportunity to go into the facts of how egregious 16 Michael Giles' case is. But he is sitting in 17 prison now for 25 years and Trayvon Martin's 18 killer is walking around free.

19 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you,
20 Mr. Crump.

21 Professor Russel-Brown.

22 MS. KATHERYN RUSSEL-BROWN: Thank you 23 for the opportunity to meet and speak with this 24 revered and august group with a 57 year history.

25 I want to note that I'm also here in my

2 capacity as the Director for the Center for the 3 Study of Race and Race Relations at the University 4 of Florida.

5 Next year 2015 marks the 150th 6 anniversary of the passage of the 13th amendment, 7 the amendment that abolished slavery. Section two 8 of that amendment empowers Congress to uphold this 9 amendment by legislating what would have been 10 deemed badges and incidents of slavery.

11 And I would suggest that in some ways 12 what we're talking about here today, what the 13 argument is with regard to the impact of race, and 14 in particular -- ah, I'll look at the stand your 15 ground law, is about these -- these legacies and 16 about badges and incidents of this legacy of 17 slavery in this country.

18 I'd like to offer a few recommendations 19 for the commission to consider with regard to 20 addressing issues of racial bias.

21 First of all the need for racial impact 22 statements. Many have written about this, Mark 23 Mower at the Sentencing Commission -- excuse me, 24 at the Sentencing Project in particular, has 25 written eloquently about the need for racial

2 impact statements. And what I would make the case 3 for is that they shouldn't be limited to one 4 particular type of -- or piece of the justice 5 system, not just with regard to sentencing for 6 example, but that racial impact statements should 7 be required for any new laws. Anything that has 8 to do with sentencing in the criminal justice 9 system that there should be some attempt to look 10 at what the outcome will be when these laws are 11 adopted. And a few jurisdictions, a few states 12 have in fact passed racial impact -- or passed the 13 requirement for racial impact statements, 14 including Iowa was the first.

15 And so we're obviously at a point now 16 where we have stand your ground laws, at least, in 17 33 jurisdictions. At least half of the states 18 have statutes on stand your ground laws so this is 19 -- the law has already -- these laws have already 20 been passed. So what we're really talking about 21 now is post-implementation assessment of the 22 racial impact of these laws.

23 And so I would suggest that at a minimum 24 that any states that are considering stand your 25 ground laws should have to have some kind of -- 4 In some ways talking about stand your 5 ground -- and I'm glad that I'm the last person on 6 the panel in some ways because what has come 7 before has been that -- what we're talking about 8 goes beyond just one particular aspect of the 9 criminal justice system, we're not just talking 10 about stand your ground, because stand your ground 11 doesn't operate in a vacuum. We're also talking 12 about policing. We're also talking about race.

13 We're also talking about images of race. We're 14 also talking about history.

15 And so it's important to keep in mind 16 that we're talking about pre-arrests. We're 17 talking about arrests. We're talking about what 18 happens within the justice system about the 19 decision to charge. All the steps along the 20 continuum of the criminal justice system to 21 sentencing to post-sentencing. So all of this 22 matters in terms of needing to take, really, a 23 criminal justice racial census. Needing to 24 consider what the bigger picture is.

25 Earlier this year there was a bill

1
2 introduced, the Justice Integrity Act of 2014, 3 HR-3907. And this bill is designed to -- it was 4 designed to increase public confidence in the 5 justice system. And address any unwarranted 6 racial and ethnic disparities in the criminal 7 process.

8 Now this goes into, obviously, detail
9 into the bill, but that racial -- establish a 10 pilot program on racial and ethnic data, 11 defendants and victims. That this information 12 would be gathered and a look at whether or not -- 13 and to what degree race impacts outcome in cases 14 and it would end in a report by an advisory group 15 which, I'm sure members of the commission know 16 that this group would include someone from -- from 17 the commission.

18 So I would argue for making this justice 19 integrity, judicial -- Justice Integrity Act Law.
20 That Congress should pass it. That the states 21 should have similar laws and that minimally that 22 there should be some racial impact, racial impact 23 statements should be made for any proposed 24 criminal legislation.

25 Second, we need to have more than a

1
2 conversation on race. There's a general ignorance 3 about the role that race has played in the 4 development in history of this country. You can 5 graduate from high school in this country without 6 ever learning about seminal aspects of U.S.
7 history involving African Americans in particular, 8 about slave patrols, about black codes (phonetic), 9 about the Klan, about white race riots, about 10 lynching, sundown towns, the Tuskegee Syphilis 11 Experiment, redlining, freedom riders, white 12 Flight, mass incarceration. These are things that 13 young people can graduate from high school and 14 really never have had any detailed discussion, 15 conversation, reading about.

16 And this points to a large scale failing 17 in our system of public schooling. And I think we 18 missed an opportunity to teach on race. So every 19 year or so we experience a major racial incident, 20 typically, a criminal one involving the killing of 21 someone African American or some language used 22 indicating racial hatred. And so there's really 23 -- in some ways a kind of an epic race fail.

24 And we seem to come back to the same 25 place that we're talking about, images of race, in

2 particular images of African Americans that the 3 perception is that black somehow equals deviants, 4 somehow equals crime, what I call the "criminal 5 black man," one word. And that this is -- this is 6 -- this is where we are.

7 I'd like to point out that in the State 8 of Florida there is a mandate that there's 9 supposed to be some history taught on race in the 10 K through 12 curriculum. And that this should 11 include the history of African Americans, 12 including the history of African people before the 13 conflicts that led to the development of slavery, 14 the passage to America, the enslavement 15 experience, abolition, and the contributions of 16 African Americans to American society.

17 Well, why is this important? Because we 18 can't wait for incidents and be reactive to these 19 incidents involving race, involving images of 20 race, addressing issues of implicit bias after 21 they've happened. We have to do something about 22 what people know about, what they experience with 23 regard to race.

24 So let me just say in conclusion that 25 with regard to one last recommendation and this

2 supports what has been said already by Professor 3 Harris and that is more data, more information on 4 implicit bias. And I would just also like to add 5 that in some of the research there have been -- 6 have included studies including police officers 7 who have shown that they too make the connection 8 between race and something negative about African 9 Americans in that association.

10 Thank you for your time.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you, 12 Professor. At this point I'm going to open it to 13 commissioners for questions.

14 And, Commissioner Yaki.

15 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Yes, thank you very 16 much, Mr. Chair.

17 I have a question for the panel. I 18 think -- I think it's fairly simple but it 19 probably isn't. If you are -- one of the 20 rationales for stand your ground has been that it 21 will enhance the protection of people in society.
22 And my question sort of goes to the heart of why 23 we're here today. And that is, if you're an 24 African American are your protections enhanced by 25 stand your ground laws?

MR. DAVID HARRIS: I know that others are going to testify Commissioner about the empirical evidence and some already have, but I think -- there is no evidence that this is protecting -- that it makes anybody safer in a sense because homicides increase in states with these laws. And it does not, as was also advocated, in the initial run up to these laws, they do not seem to stop other kinds of serious crime either.

So I think that there's no -- there's certainly no evidence that this is making anyone safer. And as far as whether it makes African Americans safer, just go back to Dr. Roman's research, there's real evidence that this introduces a level of bias into the system. It increases the bias that might already be there, because as a number of people said this morning, there is already background bias in the system but it makes it -- it just makes it more so.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Heriot --

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: I think he asked the panel --

1

2

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Oh, I'm sorry.

3

MR. JOHN ROMAN: So I'd like to say

4 something about that as well. I think that -- so 5

I testified earlier that the evidence is that if 6 you look at these cross-race patterns of victims

7 and offenders that the stand your ground -- 8 application of a stand your ground law in any 9 state increases the likelihood that any cross-race

10 victim offender combination will be more likely to 11 be found justified except for black-on-white 12 homicides, which don't change.

13

So I think two things are going on there 14 that are really important. One thing that is 15 going on there is that this law is in fact 16 increasing the number of times that people are 17 found to be justified for taking somebody else's 18 life without any prior evidence that that was a 19 problem.

20

One, that people were being wrongfully 21 convicted. And that applies to whites shooting 22 whites, or killing whites. Blacks killing blacks, 23

and whites killing blacks -- but not to blacks 24 killing whites.

25

So it's making a disparity that's

2 already pretty big even bigger. And the other 3 thing that it's doing that we haven't talked much 4 about here is it's doing it in a really haphazard 5 manner. So if you believe that -- that we've 6 increased the number of justifiable homicides -- 7 homicides that are found to be justifiable and you 8 don't see any prior evidence that there was a 9 problem with wrongful convictions in these cases 10 then basically what you've done is doubled the 11 number of times that justice isn't served. And 12 you've doubled the number of times that justice 13 isn't served, but not for blacks when they're 14 involved in a homicide with whites.

15 So it just seems to make the disparities 16 more haphazard and less just.

17 MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: No.

18 MR. JOHN ROMAN: That's a better answer 19 than mine.

20 MS. KATHERYN RUSSEL-BROWN: No. No, 21 there's no empirical evidence to support the 22 claim. It's something that comes up whenever 23 there's new criminal legislation that because 24 blacks are disproportionately victimized by crime, 25 by serious crime, that they will benefit if the law is harsher, but there's no -- there's no support for that.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Heriot.

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Krouse, I need to understand a little better about the data collection that you were talking about for justifiable homicides. I'm feeling a little lost particularly when you said that justifiable homicides may be massively under reported.

I assume that's not true of actual homicides. I mean, the homicides -- the ones that are classified as murder and voluntary manslaughter -- for that matter involuntary manslaughter.

So could you tell me how this works? At what point do police departments report a homicide? I mean, sometimes I assume a homicide occurs, they don't know whether it is a justifiable homicide, a murder, or a manslaughter. How does this work?

At what point do they report it? If they report it early do they then go back and 3 amend and say, "Okay, this was justifiable or this one was murder." How often do they do that?

2

4

5

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Well, there's no

6 fixed procedure it's by agency by agency and they 7 fill out a form for the FBI. And it can be at any 8

process they decide they're going to report on it.

9

So these reports reflect data collection at 10 various stages of an investigation. But, you 11 know --

12

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Are they

13 constantly being amended? I mean, I'm really 14 quite lost here --

15

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: No, they're not 16 constantly being amended. So they send in the 17 report --

18

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: So something could 19 be reported -- there's a murder that turns out to 20 be a justifiable homicide and it never gets 21 recorded, right?

22

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: There's a

23 possibility that there are justifiable homicides

24 that are recorded that are later found to be 25 murders and vice-a-versa murders that are later

2 found to be justifiable homicides. And neither 3 the UCR nor the SHR reflect that.

4 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: So my 5 understanding is that when it comes to justifiable 6 homicides that there's no requirement that -- that 7 police departments be doing that, and perhaps over 8 time we've seen more and more police departments 9 reporting those and that that could drive these 10 statistics -- you suggested that in one of your 11 charts.

12 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Well, I find it 13 interesting that you used the word requirement 14 because this is one of the -- one of the 15 fascinating things about America and the FBI and 16 state and local law enforcement, this is all 17 grassroots. This is state and locals coming to 18 the FBI, and the FBI saying, "Yeah, it's a good 19 idea to collect this data. And to the extent that 20 you'll provide it to us we'll be happy to compile 21 it for you." Same with criminal history records.
22 And I don't want to get into the legalities of 23 Congress or the federal government requiring 24 states to do certain things, but in general we 25 don't require them to submit these records, they

2 do it on their own.

3 However, as I pointed out, it's somewhat 4 intermittent. We're much more confident about the 5 just straight up murder and non-negligent homicide 6 data than we are on the justifiable homicides.
7 We're much more confident about the justifiable 8 homicides by law enforcement. But Gary Kleck in 9 Point Blank has estimated, and I think this is -- 10 has stood to some academic scrutiny, that the 11 justifiable homicides carried out by private 12 citizens are under reported in both the UCR and 13 the SHR.

14 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: So -- and over 15 time I take it, you know, if it's true that we've 16 had more and more agencies reporting this then we 17 would get, probably, a bias in the stats that 18 would make it look like the number of justifiable 19 homicides is going up. Is that --

20 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: It's been -- it's 21 been suggested that that might be the case. Might 22 be.

23 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: If I --

24 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: But, we have no
25 firm evidence that that is the case.

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: But the chart that you showed I think -- sure -- the chart you showed was limited to a certain time period and I didn't get a chance to see it. How long a period was that?

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: It's 2001 through 2010.

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: So do you have any information about whether or not there has been an increase or a decrease or -- or -- you know, are more and more agencies reporting this or is that not true?

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: I didn't have an opportunity to glean that from the SHR data but that could be done.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. Roman.

MR. JOHN ROMAN: So, it's a great question, right. I mean, these data are flawed. They're fundamentally flawed and I think you did a wonderful job earlier of describing how they're flawed. And it's -- it's voluntary reporting, you know, it's what we have.

But I think what's really important in understanding these data is that it's not the 2 overall increase in the number of places that are 3 reporting and the overall number of homicides that 4 we have some understanding of, what matters is 5 really, do the proportions change. Right?

6 If we go from, you know, two and a half 7 percent justified to almost four percent 8 justified, it sort of doesn't matter if we're 9 getting better compliance or less compliance or 10 whatever it is, what matters is that that 11 proportion of the number of justify -- homicides 12 that are found to be justified is increasing -- 13 ---regardless of whatever --

14 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: In the stand your 15 ground states you're talking about there?

16 MR. JOHN ROMAN: Right. That's correct.
17 Yes.

18 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. I'm going 19 to ask a couple of questions, and we're going to 20 have Commissioner Narasaki, Commissioner 21 Achtenberg.

22 We're also going to want one of our 23 staff members Dr. Goliday to ask some questions 24 and then any other commissioners who indicate so.

25 My two questions -- the first one is one

2 that I asked the earlier panel. Well, you know, 3 as we are really talking about this in the 4 black/white binary and I know there are 5 limitations on the data that's being reported, but 6 do you all have any information on the impact of 7 these laws on Latino's or other ethnic minorities 8 or religious minorities such as Muslim and Arab 9 Americans?

10 Anybody?

11 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Well, sir, I can 12 tell you that I've spent the past year very 13 carefully looking at multiple victim murders in 14 the wake of Newtown, and that's a very complicated 15 question because I've went back and I've 16 identified the names of the victims and the 17 offenders in those incidents where four or more 18 people were shot to death.

19 And when you look at that it's very 20 difficult to tell. If you're Hispanic, that's a 21 matter of ethnicity, it's not a matter of race.
22 So you can be a black Hispanic, you can be a white 23 Hispanic, for that matter you can be an American 24 Indian Hispanic.

25 And when you look at people who are of 2 Middle Eastern descent they're usually always 3 considered white in the UCR. So there are 4 limitations. And this all goes back to an OMB 5 (phonetic) Circular. And it's the way that we 6 collect data on race and ethnicity in the United 7 States.

8 And I can't remember the exact year, but 9 we haven't always collected data in the UCR or the 10 SHR on ethnicity. It's a fairly recent thing, 11 within the last decade or half.

12 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. Thank you.

13 Mr. Roman, I don't know if you've had 14 the chance to -- I don't know if any of you have 15 had the chance to see the written testimony of 16 other witnesses that have appeared or will appear, 17 but in the afternoon panel we have John Lott of 18 the Crime Prevention Research Center. And in his 19 written remarks -- I don't know, have you seen 20 those, Mr. Roman?

21 MR. JOHN ROMAN: I have not.

22 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: I'm going to read 23 you an excerpt and I'd like to hear your thoughts 24 on it. He actually, specifically, addresses your 25 report -- The Urban Institute Report.

2 He says, "In contrast to the Tampa Bay 3 Tribune data a recent Urban Institute study by 4 John Roman claims to have found stand your ground 5 laws appear to exacerbate those racial differences 6 as cases all over are significantly more likely to 7 be justified in stand your ground states than in 8 non-stand your ground states."

9 "Roman acknowledges that his data lacks 10 details available in the Tampa Bay Tribune data.
11 The data here cannot completely address this 12 problem because the setting of the incident cannot 13 be observed. Indeed Roman's estimates contain 14 virtually none of the information available in the 15 Tampa Bay Tribune Report data set."

16 "For example, his data has no 17 information on whether any eyewitnesses saw the 18 confrontation or whether there existed physical 19 evidence. And it has no information on who 20 initiated the confrontation, where the attack 21 occurred, or the type of case."

22 "Nevertheless even using the limited 23 information Roman draws the wrong conclusion from 24 his analysis to the extent to which the Urban 25 Institute Study proves anything," he says, "It

2 proves the opposite of what Roman claims."

3 Could you address those concerns?

4 MR. JOHN ROMAN: Sure. I would be 5 delighted to. So I think -- so there's a couple 6 of things going on here. So, you know, there's an 7 old saying in statistics, "All statistical models 8 are wrong, and some are useful."

9 And the question is, which of these 10 statistical models are most useful? So the Tampa 11 Bay Tribune analysis is really what we would call 12 in the social science a convenience sample. They 13 just got what they could get.

14 And if you want to understand the whole 15 of the stand your ground issue, and the whole of 16 the justifiable homicide you want to go to as 17 broad a sample as you can obtain. Or if you want 18 to go to a small sample that you want to dive 19 really deeply into, you want to make sure that 20 it's a random selection so that you can say things 21 about the cases that you didn't get data on. So 22 this is the choice that we have.

23 So the Supplementary Homicide Report 24 data does not contain information about the 25 context. That's a very important limitation of 2 the data, and I think that we acknowledged that in 3 the report. But it does contain -- it's not -- 4 it's not -- it's not a sampling strategy, it's 5 every single homicide that occurred in this 6 period -- it's a census.

7 So on one hand we have information about 8 every single case that happened. On the other 9 hand the Tampa Bay Trib looked at a couple hundred 10 cases that they could get data on and try to draw 11 some inferences from it. I think it all sort of 12 helps to paint the picture.

13 But, you know, I mean, I teach 14 statistics at the University of Pennsylvania and, 15 you know, I would prefer that my students would 16 work with data that's more of a census, and if 17 they can't get that then sort of a random 18 probability sample. And if they can't get that 19 then a convenience sample like what the Tampa Bay 20 Trib did would probably be the last resort for me.

21 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you.

22 MS. KATHERYN RUSSEL-BROWN: And related 23 to that -- I just want to go back to the question 24 that you asked earlier about moving past the 25 black/white binary area. That in that data, that the Tampa Bay Times collected they do have 3 information on Hispanic's as victims and as 4 offenders using stand your ground.

1

61

2

5

6 thank you. I did see that. And it's an 7 interesting paradox there if I understand that 8 correctly that Hispanic's are more likely to not 9 be convicted when they're using the stand your 10 ground laws, but they are also more likely to be 11 the victims of shootings involving white shooters.

12

So I guess I'll ask Mr. Lott a question

13 about that in the other panel, unless some of you 14 have the answer to that, but -- 15

So at this point I'd like to cede the 16 floor to Commissioner Narasaki, then Commissioner

17

Achtenberg, then Dr. Goliday.

18

Commissioner.

19

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Thank you. So I

20 have a few questions that some of you can answer.

21

I'm interested in whether there is implicit bias

22 research about Asian's, Latino's, Native

23

American's, and Arab American's that should cause

24 us concern in relationship to the stand your 25 ground laws?

2 I'm also interested in hearing about -- 3 we've talked a lot about the data deficiencies, 4 I'm interested in any recommendations you think we 5 should consider about how do we address the gaps 6 that exist?

7 Should the federal government, for 8 example, consider tying a grant for law 9 enforcement support to better data collection on 10 the state level?

11 And then third -- so, this morning we 12 had a member of the state legislature in South 13 Carolina say, "Well, it may be true that 14 eventually someone will be able to prove that they 15 acted in self-defense and be able to clear 16 themselves. That the challenge is that until that 17 time they're held in jail, they have to spend 18 funds defending themselves, and in some states you 19 could be held for a very long time deprived of 20 your freedom."

21 And in his view -- I think he's a 22 defense attorney it sounded like. In his view 23 stand your ground has helped people in those 24 situations who should be free, be free up front, 25 instead of having to try to get themselves through

2 what can often be a challenging criminal system.

3 And then my final question is to Crump, 4 which is, you talked a lot about the 5 unconstitutionally vague notion of reasonable 6 perception. So this morning we had this debate 7 about how different is stand your ground from the 8 traditional self-defense laws. And so this notion 9 of reasonable fear if you could explain that 10 difference because we had a lot of debate about 11 that this morning.

12 Thank you.

13 MR. DAVID HARRIS: Commissioner, I'll 14 try on your first two questions. If you go to the 15 existing website for the implicit association 16 operations -- I think it's now called Project 17 Implicit -- ProjectImplicit.org. You will see a 18 number of different implicit association tests. I 19 haven't been to that site in a little bit myself, 20 but I remember that there are now implicit 21 association tests about testing biases in all 22 kinds of situations.

23 I do remember -- I think at one point 24 there was one involving Asian populations, and 25 another involving Muslims. There are gender ones.

2 There are same sex relationship ones. So there's 3 quite a variety of this and it's there for looking 4 -- and the test taking, whether this would be a 5 concern whether those kinds of implicit bias would 6 be a concern in any stand your ground state, I 7 would say, yes. The question is going to be 8 whether you have any particular population in the 9 stand your ground state that you're focusing on 10 that is going to end up using the statute -- or as 11 the victim in a shooting.

12 And if you have a substantial enough 13 population I would think that these questions of 14 implicit bias would apply in those cases too.

15 Your second question about tying federal 16 funding to data collection, I think that that is 17 an idea that has a lot of merit. And I would 18 simply point out that the federal government not 19 having the ability to tell local law enforcement, 20 "You will do this, you will do that," or to tell 21 states you're going to have certain kind of law.
22 That's obviously what the Constitution says, but 23 the power of the purse rules.

24 When in a misguided attempt, perhaps one 25 remembers, to have a 55 mile an hour speed limit,

1

2 remember those days? The federal government said, 3

"Well, you don't have to, but no more highway 4 money." And guess what happened?

5

They had -- there was a controversy

6 about the legal limit for drunk driving. The 7 federal government wanting it to come down to .08

8

in states that did not have that limit. "Well, you don't have to do it, but if you want that highway 10 money think about it." And guess what happened?

9

11

So this is something that Congress has 12 done, the Executive Branch has been part of for 13 many, many years, and many different 14 circumstances, and I think that this is one where 15 they should do it too.

16

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: I have just a couple of things to add insights there. One,

17

18

Congress does have power of the purse but the 19 discretionary plot is shrinking with every passing 20 year.

21

Two, the amount of money that we devote 22 to state and local law enforcement has shrunk --

23 particularly in light of 9/11, and it's now in the 24

Homeland Security bucket, if you will.

25

And third, the state and local law

1
2 enforcement grant program has a number of ties 3 added on to it already, penalties for this,
4 penalties for that to encourage states, if you 5 will, through a carrot and stick type process to 6 do this or that.

7 I would suggest possibly is that one of 8 these things is a priority that can be set for the 9 FBI to just strengthen, to encourage the states 10 that we need better data, that our data has 11 somewhat diminished over the years and we could 12 use better data. They oversee this and there's a 13 compact that everyone enters into. So it's one of 14 the great things about America, it's grassroots.
15 But if you don't have strong leadership, and the 16 National Academy of Sciences has two books on this 17 and I recommend them to you on foreign related 18 violence and the statistics that are available, 19 and also what's happening in the Bureau of Justice 20 Statistics, you might want to take a look there 21 for different insights and pathways you might be 22 able to take to encourage better data collection.

23 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: If I can ask one 24 more question. Because you explained the 25 challenge with Hispanic data -- ethnic data,

1

2 right, but Asian is a race category --

3 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Yes, Asian Pacific
4 Island --

5 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: -- yeah, so -- 6 right. So is there data available on how stand 7 your ground laws effect them on both sides of the 8 equation?

9 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Not specifically.
10 I mean, you'd have to go and you'd have to look 11 at, you know, Asian Pacific Islanders that were 12 involved in justifiable homicides, you know?

13 From there you'd have to make a 14 determination by looking at the reporting agency 15 and the month and the date of the incident to 16 determine what the circumstances were and 17 determine whether stand your ground, Castle 18 Doctrine, or some other factors were at play.

19 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: But the data's
20 there, just somebody has to look at it --

21 MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Yes. It's there 22 but it's incomplete and you would be looking at a 23 very, very fine cuts from a percentage point of 24 view.

25 MR. JOHN ROMAN: Can I -- can I just

2 offer two thoughts on that? So -- so, I mean, I 3 have the data here for -- so for the 6 year
4 period, in Hawaii for instance there were 77 5 homicides. Four were ruled to be justifiable. In 6 the Virgin Islands there were 15, there were none.

7 So, I mean, we have all the data, we 8 have the code, we could certainly do it. I'm much 9 -- I'm much more comfortable, I think, in the 10 quality of the data because I don't -- because -- 11 the thing to remember is, is the quality of the 12 data changing in some way related to justifiable 13 homicides over time?

14 The quality of the data may be changing, 15 the volume of the data may be changing, but 16 there's nothing that would make you think it has 17 anything to do with justifiable homicide. Which 18 is, you have to understand this data set is, you 19 know, 80 variables. And the variable that we're 20 talking about is 1 value 80, you know, in a list 21 of 80 different circumstances. Right?

22 And so the idea that somehow the 23 reporting is changing as a function of this 1 24 value of this 1 variable with 80 levels, it's just 25 -- it's impossible for me to believe.

2 The other thing I would say is, and the 3 other -- I would take slight objection to is, I 4 think that you either have to mandate the data 5 collection or it won't happen.

6 In the late 1990's, back when I was a 7 young man. The Bureau of Justice Statistics 8 embarked on an exercise to create the NIBRS, 9 National Incident-Base Reporting System, which is 10 basically the Supplementary Homicide Report data, 11 it's actually even more complete than that for 12 every kind of crime. And they pushed it out to 13 the states, and they asked the states to do this, 14 and the states wouldn't do it. Right?

15 They got partial compliance in 8 or 9 16 states and total compliance in just a couple of 17 others. We live in a completely different IT 18 world then we did in 1998, and 1999, and 2001 when 19 this thing really basically petered out. Right?

20 The cost to local police agencies to 21 comply with this kind of data collection 22 requirement is so trivial compared to what it was 23 in 1998 that I just don't see it as being a huge 24 ask. And it would inform -- last thought, I'm 25 sorry -- it would inform so many different

2 questions beyond just what we're talking about 3 today that are really important in reforming these 4 criminal and juvenile justice systems.

5 MR. ARKADI GERNEY: Just to add, we 6 released a report in September of last year which 7 had a number of recommendations, and one of them 8 basically mirrored what Mr. Krouse just said, 9 which is to have a year long process to work with 10 the states to improve the data collection around 11 justifiable homicides, but at the end of that if 12 it didn't improve to withhold some portion of 13 discretionary burn justice assistance grant money 14 which is the principle justice department grant 15 funding streamed to the states.

16 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Anybody else?
17 Mr. Crump.

18 MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: I think that she 19 asked a question about reasonable fear and so I 20 can address that. I'll refer to the academic, 21 great data, and this is a fascinating
22 conversation. I thank the civil rights commission 23 for doing this, but I want to point specifically 24 as it relates to the reasonableness of the fear.
25 I did get an opportunity to talk about Michael

2 Giles, so hopefully I can interject that in my 3 response.

4 Michael Giles, 25 year old African 5 American, never convicted of a crime his whole 6 life. Mother and father, military. Brother, 7 military. He's in the military. A good citizen.
8 From everybody's standpoint this bar fight that he 9 has nothing do with, he's attacked, the testimony 10 is the guy was looking for the next person he saw 11 to knock out. His testimony is that he lunged at 12 him with the full weight of his body trying to 13 knock him out. While he's on the ground and 14 people are kicking and hitting him he takes the 15 permit -- the gun that he has a permit in his 16 ankle, and shoots the guy in the leg. He is -- 17 scratches his leg. He's let out of the hospital 18 in a matter of hours.

19 He goes to court, stand your ground, if 20 it should apply to anybody it's him. I mean, 21 let's be real when you think about what happened 22 to Trayvon, somebody's following you and say they 23 all get away -- Mr. Gerney broke it down very 24 clearly the history of Trayvon's killer.

25 You look at the history of Michael

2 Giles, there's nothing there. But when you come 3 to the reasonableness of fear and how this law's 4 been applied, it's startling because the testimony 5 was first based on attempted murder. The victim 6 got on the stand and said, "No, he wasn't trying 7 to kill me. If he was wanting to kill me he could 8 have shot me." So the prosecutor had to drop 9 that. But the prosecutor still insisted on going 10 forward on the case, on aggravated battery.

11 And so what you have -- what happened, 12 the jury came back because they thought "Well, 13 aggravated battery is lesser and they don't have 14 to deal with the sentencing." And they convicted 15 him not knowing that he was going to get 25 years.

16 So I know I'm going a little around your 17 question but I want to bring it back because you 18 look at Marissa Alexander, you look at Georgia, 19 you look at all of these things and you say, 20 "Well, if Mr. Giles would have been a white male 21 would he have got greater stand your ground 22 consideration?" If Marissa Alexander had been a 23 white female would she have gotten greater stand 24 your ground consideration?

25 And I'm sorry I don't have all of the 2 data because as I understand it they don't really 3 want the data. They don't want to present it out 4 there because I know the Congressional Black 5 Caucus asked that question about, "Well, who are 6 the victims of stand your ground and who are the 7 beneficiaries of stand your ground?" And they 8 asked the state and the state didn't get anything 9 back. As it relates to the -- representative -- 10 State Representative from South Carolina, you look 11 at that and you scratch your head and you say, 12 "Well, we do want it to be an important thing when 13 somebody decides to take somebody's life." When 14 you decide to kill somebody, that you don't want 15 it to just be so arbitrary that we have a law that 16 says you don't have to try to solve it with 17 conflict resolution, you don't have to try to 18 resolve it peacefully, just take your gun out and 19 shoot them because remember --- we have 20 self-defense." Under self-defense, you know, the 21 law is different you have a duty to retreat if 22 it's reasonable and safe that you can do so. But 23 under stand your ground you have no such duty. So 24 we have a lot to do with the application, what's 25 real and how it's being applied. So I would hope

2 that as far as collecting the data is important, 3 but looking at how these courts around America, 4 not just in Florida, but around America -- in 5 Louisiana we have stand your ground cases all the 6 time I'm involved in. Arizona -- and when the 7 victim is black or brown they are criminalized and 8 the implicit biases are put on thick. The person 9 who's dead on the ground as an excuse to justify 10 what the killer has done.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. So I'm 12 going to go to Commissioner Achtenberg, followed 13 by Dr. Goliday, followed by Commissioner 14 Timmons-Goodson. And do any of the commissioners 15 on the phone want to get on the list?

16 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Peter Kirsanow
17 here, I think I may have a question.

18 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay, Commissioner 19 Kirsanow.

20 Commissioner Achtenberg, you have the 21 floor.

22 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you, 23 Mr. Chairman. I have in the great tradition of my 24 colleagues, I have two questions.

25 My first question is to

2 Dr. Russell-Brown. You say in your written 3 testimony that if there were ways to make implicit 4 bias explicit that might have some salutary effect 5 on all of these matters.

6 Could you further describe ways of 7 making implicit bias explicit that might be things 8 for this commission to consider when we get to 9 recommendations should we conclude that implicit 10 bias is actually an equal protection or due 11 process problem when it comes to the 12 administration of justice and the racial 13 disparities that may -- that the statistics may 14 suggest exist.

15 MS. KATHERYN RUSSEL-BROWN: The point 16 that I'm -- the point that I'm making there is 17 that we need to -- I guess it's always -- play the 18 piano with all ten fingers. Right? That we need 19 to consider implicit bias. We need to look at it.
20 We need to see what impact it has on people's 21 perceptions of fear, calculating fear, the 22 empirical research, the sociological research, 23 criminological research, supports that whites see 24 African Americans as symbols of fear, that there 25 are these direct associations and indirect

1 2 associations made. So the implicit bias and the 3 perceptions of what race means, that's there. But 4 in terms of, sort of, nuts and bolts, you know 5 making the connection to what's actually going on 6 in the criminal justice system I think that we -- 7 and that's why I made the recommendation about the 8 racial impact statement. We have to take a look 9 at what's actually going on on the ground.

10 Now at the same time that -- that this 11 needs to happen we're also talking about needing 12 to have -- the idea of having some kind of 13 national data base to gather information.

14 So in addition to, if there is new 15 legislation related to criminal laws that there 16 should be some racial impact statement.

17 There also needs to be -- there also 18 need to be databases that gather information so we 19 can evaluate what's actually going on.

20 So the idea here is that we need to be 21 mindful of the fact that there is something about 22 race -- that race does matter in the 23 administration of justice. And that people's 24 attitudes about crime, attitudes about race, then 25 in turn impact what does actually happen.

So we need to look at these different places. And that's the main point.

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you very much.

And, Mr. Crump, I'm intrigued by the issue of the case that you filed in Georgia questioning the constitutionality of the Georgia stand your ground law. Is that the context?

MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: Yes, ma'am.

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Could you articulate more extensively the rationale that you're proffering there and could you make some suggestions if you will for issues that this commission might consider addressing as it relates to the constitutional principles at issue in your Georgia case?

MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: Absolutely. The biggest inference, I guess, if you want to try to frame it, by creating a right to kill based on an individuals reasonableness, fear without defining circumstances with -- demonstrate reasonable -- the act that potentially deprives individuals of their lives without due process. And once you do that the cost of that infringes on the fundamental

2 due process right of life. It must be reviewed 3 under strict scrutiny. And I think that's where 4 this commission can speak very robustly on that 5 issue because I think stand your ground, it's 6 always been this sort of question whether this is 7 constitutional on so many levels.

8 But this whole thing of just the 9 reasonableness, like, how do you qualify that to 10 make it uniform and not be arbitrary so we have 11 everybody getting equal justice and it's not one 12 thing in this court, and South Florida one way in 13 this court, and North Florida one way, and Georgia 14 one way, and Arizona one way, and Arkansas one 15 way, and South Carolina, because when you start 16 looking at it being applied like those things -- 17 being applied like that, but yet you go back to 18 the Constitution of the United States -- and 19 saying -- where is a Constitutional privilege to 20 Americans being deprived here. Being, I think, 21 you can bring it to uniformity of everybody in the 22 state saying we're not saying you can't have a 23 stand your ground law, but your stand your ground 24 law gotta be un-vague, it has to be clear, it has 25 to tell people what and when they can take 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 somebody's life and it be uniform.

You can't say just because it's a black person I think, "Oh, those -- those black men are more dangerous than white men so we can give you a little extra discretion to shoot a black man."

And that's troubling on so many levels. And as we look at this lawsuit we -- we -- it's about a 40 page complaint so I can't give you all of the details, but I'm glad that you all provided me with a lot of experts to choose from when we go before the Georgia Supreme Court.

But it is one of the things -- I'll say in conclusion and -- where is it is here -- in conclusion, when we talked about the Castle Doctrine it was objective as my classmate Miss (Inaudible) -- you know, we got taught in law school, the Castle Doctrine it was objective because you were in the house. And so if the person had a mortgage or they had a lease and stuff, it was real objective. Didn't have to guess about whether the person -- whether it was their house and there was an issue of self-defense. It was their house and why are you in their house threatening them.

It gets a lot more subjective when you say, "I'm walking down the street in Sanford, Florida, in a gated community and I think somebody's not supposed to be there, and I go confront them, and I make sure that when I shoot -- because that's the message that we're sending, that the person is dead because if they live -- Marissa Alexander -- it's a lot harder to win your stand your ground argument when somebody can argue that "I wasn't a threat to your life."

So when you look at that it becomes very subjective. And when it becomes that subjective it becomes too vague and it doesn't pass the constitutional muster. And that's what we're raising to the stand your ground law has been unconstitutional.

We haven't got a writ of certiorari yet, but we're hoping that the court is going to let us argue it, we're waiting. The commission can speak to that issue and help so much this group of lawyers and parents who are crying out to say "We can't bring our children back but let's try to do something for their legacy so it won't happen to your children."

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: So the subjectivity is in the place where this defense can now be proffered as well as the fact that it used to be an objective standard and now it's a subjective standard. We heard in the prior panel the State Representative from South Carolina acknowledged that if I -- if somebody punches me in the face, and I'm in public I can take my gun out and shoot them. And he went on to say that if I think the person is going to punch me in the face and my -- you know, there's no -- there's no reasonable standard that's applied to that. If I think the person is going to punch me in the face and I pull my gun out and shoot him that's justifiable under their stand your ground law.

Is that your understanding of the way the law operates?

MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: Absolutely.

Miss Achtenberg you brought up a very important point and that's the third prong. In self-defense you have a duty to retreat if it was reasonable and safe that you do so. And who could argue with that being a bad law, that you don't kill somebody, if you can get away you have a duty to 2 do so if it's reasonable and it's safe. Now if 3 it's not reasonable and safe you can defend 4 yourself. But if it's reasonably safe you can do 5 it.

6 In the Castle Doctrine said you don't 7 have to retreat if you're in your house, but 8 self-defense says you can. So now stand your 9 ground, just as you said -- say -- even if I think 10 you're going to be a threat to me, if you say a 11 word to me and I think that you can follow through 12 with the threat I can just kill you. I don't have 13 to say, "Let me get in my car and drive away."

14 You know, we have -- there have been 15 cases where people in the car could easily drive 16 away, but they shot the person. "I felt 17 threatened, and why did I have to run." -- think 18 about the matter in Texas with the young man 19 breaking in the neighbors house. The police tell 20 him, "Don't go over there." He goes over there 21 anyway, says, "I know my rights, I can stand my 22 ground."

23 Where does it end? The theater with the 24 popcorn. You know, I thought that he was a threat 25 to my life. And so it's so subjective, so now

2 there are three prongs that tag it 3 constitutionally. One is on the reasonableness of 4 the fear. The second is on this subjective 5 criteria, now that it is no longer with the Castle 6 Doctrine -- self-defense. And the third is 7 certainly that no duty to retreat at all, 8 whatsoever, just take a gun out and shoot the 9 person.

10 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. Crump, if you 12 don't already know him Jerry Gonzalez of our State 13 Advisory Committee in Georgia is sitting in the 14 third row back there, you might also want to talk 15 to him.

16 Next we have Dr. Goliday, Commissioner 17 Timmons-Goodson, Commissioner Kirsanow, 18 Commissioner Yaki, and then we'll be close to 19 finishing up on this panel.

20 DR. SEAN GOLIDAY: Thank you. Many of 21 my questions have been addressed but I do have --

22 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Could you speak up 23 a little louder in --

24 DR. SEAN GOLIDAY: -- many of my 25 questions have been addressed but I do have just a couple of questions for Mr. Krouse and Mr. Roman.

1

84

2

5

6

7

8

Given the methodological issues you (inaudible) with the existing data sources, what would be a likely data source to kind of help us address some of the unanswered questions regarding conclusions currently being made about justifiable homicides?

9

10

11 12

13

14

And the second part of the question is, how can we work to bring that to scale or at least if not to scale, in theoretically important states
-- that just kind of start looking at this issue beyond the federally sponsored data collection efforts.

15

16

17 18 19 20 21

22

23 24

25

MR. JOHN ROMAN: Those are hard questions. So with respect to the first question, you know, you could potentially reverse engineer some of this stuff, right? And we're talking about in most places where there just aren't that many homicides a year. You could potentially, you know, fund a study that could go and look at the conda (phonetic) newspaper report legal filings about the nature of some random sample of these reports, learn something about the context about them, and try an answer this really critical

2 question, right? Which is, are homicides of 3 whites-on-blacks different than homicides of 4 blacks-on-whites. Right? If one is more likely 5 to be in context of self-defense than the other 6 then the racial disparity is appropriate.

7 The racial disparity is so, you know, 8 gargantuan that it's hard to believe that would be 9 true. But you could potentially do that. There 10 are some confidentiality issues there that I would 11 be a little concerned about. Beyond that I don't 12 know what else you could do.

13 The bigger issue here and we face this 14 throughout the criminal/juvenile justice system is 15 that states know what they spend and they have no 16 idea what they buy. And they don't know what 17 they're buying in terms of law enforcement. They 18 don't know what they're buying in terms of 19 community placements for juveniles, or sentencing, 20 or corrections, they don't think about outcomes, 21 they don't share data, they don't share knowledge.

22 And a lot of what's going in the world 23 that I inhabit these days is trying to get to 24 force states, counties and local governments to 25 articulate what it is they're trying to accomplish

2 and that means making them share data.

3 If you share data it forces you to see 4 all of your worts. And I think any 5 effort that this commission can make to force 6 local, county, and state jurisdictions to -- to 7 collect, analyze, share and think about data 8 around these kinds of issues will force other 9 reforms that are also really important as well as 10 to help us articulate the answers to the questions 11 that we can't today.

12 MR. DAVID HARRIS: If I could interrupt 13 just a second. I apologize to the commission I'm 14 going to have to depart for an airplane. I'm 15 thankful for the opportunity to testify here and 16 I'd be glad to answer any questions in writing.
17 Thank you.

18 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you, 19 Professor.

20 Yes, Mr. Crump.

21 MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: I just -- I got a 22 response from Lucia McBath and she again wanted to 23 apologize, but they just sentenced the killer of 24 her son, Michael Dunn, to 105 years on top of a 25 life sentence. She asked me to share this with 1

2 the commission.

3

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you.

4

Any other responses to Dr. Goliday's

5 questions?

6

MR. WILLIAM KROUSE: Well, I agree with 7

Dr. Roman that we need better data. There's a need to improve our crime statistics. And if I 9 lived in a perfect world and I could dedicate

8

10 myself to this issue I would go and I would look 11 at each one of those SHR records and contact the 12 reporting agencies and try and find out what the 13 circumstances were.

14

I mean, you're looking at 15 stranger-on-stranger, white-on-black, firearm

16 related justifiable homicides over that 10 year

17 period there's 250 in the SHR. Then I would try 18 and do a literature search to get some sort of 19 reading on the error rate there as to how many 20 weren't reported. And that would give me some 21 idea of the prevalence, because right now I don't think that we can be too confident about the 23 prevalence of private citizen justifiable

22

24 homicides in general when that filters down to 25 every other category.

2 So that's what I would work on. And 3 that's what I've been doing for the past year on 4 mass shootings and it's -- it's astounding what 5 you find. And in this country where we put such a 6 primacy on self-defense you would want to know 7 where those numbers are falling I would think.
8 And you'd want to have confidence in those 9 numbers.

10 And the Bureau -- I've had discussions
11 with the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the NIBRS 12 Program is advancing where we can start to do data 13 samples on different questions and do some 14 statistical sampling, but that's on a nation-wide 15 basis that's not state by state.

16 And so I would hope that, you know, we'd 17 start to look at these things a little more 18 carefully in the future and at some point I will 19 given the time and resources.

20 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. Professor 21 -- I'm sorry. Commissioner Timmons-Goodson.

22 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Yes.
23 Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I had this 24 question for Professor Harris, but I'd like for 25 those that are present if you'd like to take a

2 stab at it I'd appreciate it.

3 As I listened to Attorney Crump and 4 others talking about reasonableness, objective 5 standards, subjective standard, in describing fear 6 it just seemed to me that it was extremely 7 relevant that implicit bias is extremely relevant.

8 It leads me to ask that given that 9 people often don't recognize and can't easily 10 eliminate implicit bias I was wondering whether 11 any of you might see anyway in which we might 12 alter our stand your ground laws to both take into 13 account this very valuable research information 14 that we now have the benefit of, and take 15 advantage of it in a way that will both allow us 16 to protect those that fear, attack, and also to 17 avoid the unnecessary deaths of the alleged 18 attackers. Any takers?

19 MR. ARKADI GERNEY: Well, I think, you 20 know I would say, and I think Mr. Crump spoke to 21 this earlier to a degree, I think one of the 22 problems with stand your ground laws and the great 23 burden it places on jury's, but also the shooters 24 themselves at the moment they're making their 25 decision and to act reasonably is the great

2 increase in the gray area and the uncertainty that 3 it creates. So when it was only the Castle
4 Doctrine and you had this location restriction it 5 made it easier for people who were applying stand 6 your ground laws in the course of shooting someone 7 in their home -- or self-defense laws in the 8 course of shooting someone in their home, but also 9 for a jury that would go look at it later to try 10 to figure out what happened. It was a narrower 11 set of circumstances, the scope of what could be 12 reasonableness, this gray area was much narrower.

13 And then when you bring in the, you 14 know, the work of Mr. Harris and others and 15 implicit racial bias, when you have an enormous 16 scope of what possibly could be reasonable, the 17 scope of what could be biased is much larger. The 18 rule -- there are not bright lines here.

19 And the consequences of not having 20 bright lines can -- can -- can hurt people either 21 way. That can mean wrongful convictions because 22 these very vague laws are applied very differently 23 depending on what particular jury you happen to 24 get. What particular defendant you happen to get.
25 And the uncertainty itself is a huge part of the problem.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Any other responses?

MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: The only thing that I might add to that is when you think about the Castle Doctrine as opposed to what we have now with the stand -- oh, I'm sorry, self-defense as to what we have now with stand your ground, and in many of these cases the objectiveness was, can the jury say "Did you have a duty to retreat? Was it safe?" But that's just thrown out now. And so it makes it that more subjective. I just fear them.
So the only issue is, how can you prove fear in somebody and if it's a genuine fear or if it's a fear that -- I go back to Trayvon. I just thought that black people walking in my gated community weren't supposed to happen based on there was a robbery by a black person months before. If you remember the trial, which definitely couldn't understand why that was allowed to come into court. But because of that it somehow justified him stopping to detain any young black person walking in his gated community.

And so you go from that very objective

2 fact -- that self-defense saying, "hold on," but 3 if you had no duty to engage him and you could 4 have got away then the jury can say you're guilty 5 because this wasn't self-defense. But now with 6 stand your ground is just such much gray -- 7 there's no bright line as Mr. Gerney said for the 8 jury -- to help the jury understand it.

9 MS. KATHERYN RUSSEL-BROWN: To answer 10 your question or my comment -- or to answer your 11 question is to retain the reasonable fear aspect, 12 that it should be an objective standards, that it 13 just shouldn't be that a person indicates that 14 they, themselves, were fearful. I mean, the law 15 should work in an objective way.

16 I think Pennsylvania, which has a stand 17 your ground law as well, has included that in it 18 there must be some showing of a weapon. There 19 must be something objective about this fear.

20 MR. BENJAMIN CRUMP: And, Mr. Chair -- 21 if I could -- also remember that the initial 22 aggressor aspect of it. Most states say that you 23 can't be the initial aggressor and still claim 24 self-defense. But I submit to you if the person 25 is dead on the ground how can you prove who was

2 the initial aggressor?

3 MR. ARKADI GERNEY: Or if you're in -- 4 there are some states that allow invocations of 5 stand your ground if you're in the commission of a 6 crime. So, for example, if you're in the process 7 of dealing drugs and that confrontation arises and 8 you fear for your life you can legitimately claim 9 a stand your ground defense in some states, 10 not in others.

11 So I think all of those would be things 12 that would narrow the circumstances.

13 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. So
14 Commissioner Kirsanow, and then Commissioner Yaki.

15 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Thank you, 16 Mr. Chair. I'm very interested in this notion of 17 implicit bias, but unfortunately Professor Harris 18 I understand has left. It seems to me that the 19 implicit bias is a possible contributing factor 20 for racial disparities in stand your ground 21 confrontations where the attacker is black.
22 Interested in kind of disaggregating the 23 contributing factors, it seems to me that it could 24 be likely another contributing factor to 25 disparities in stand your ground confrontations,

2 could be that someone reasonably may believe that 3 they had to defend themselves where an attacker is 4 armed with a gun as opposed to being unarmed or 5 where someone is being confronted in their home or 6 there's a home invasion as opposed to being on the 7 street. So I kind of wonder if, maybe, this is 8 best put to Mr. Roman. In that context, isn't it 9 true that the Tampa Bay Tribune data show that the 10 blacks killed in stand your ground confrontations 11 are 26 points more likely to have been armed with 12 a gun as opposed to whites killed in stand your 13 ground, in nearly 3 to 1 margins are blacks more 14 likely to be killed in home invasions and 15 burglaries as opposed to whites killed in stand 16 your ground confrontations?

17 MR. JOHN ROMAN: Sure, I'm happy to take 18 a crack at that. So -- so two thoughts on that.
19 One is to say supposing that those data that you 20 just quoted are exactly right and reflect the 21 reality that we live in. The -- the -- and that 22 blacks who are killed are 3 times more likely to 23 be, you know, involved in a felony.

24 The fact is that, is a white shooter of 25 a black victim is 10 times more likely to have

2 that be ruled justified than if it's a black 3 shooter of a white victim. So even if you believe 4 the 3 to 1 is correct, there's still -- or what 5 remains is an enormous racial disparity that's a 6 little hard to understand.

7 I'd also point out Mr. Crump left, which 8 is unfortunate, so I can't say this -- but we were 9 interested in trying to get to the other data that 10 you just asked about -- (inaudible) -- and think 11 about what are the other attributes of these 12 incidents that we can observe in the data that 13 tell us something about the likelihood that a 14 shooting is ruled to be justified. And in 15 addition to the cross race stuff, if the shooter 16 is older than the victim the likelihood that it's 17 ruled justified goes way up. If they're strangers 18 it goes way up. If it's a firearm it goes way 19 up. If it's a member of law enforcement it goes 20 way up. To the point where if you were to create 21 -- and it's a very small number of cases across 22 these six years. But if you were to create a fact 23 pattern that mirrored the Trayvon Martin/George 24 Zimmerman incident where you had two strangers, a firearm was used in a homicide, the shooter is 2 white, and as we discussed Mr. Zimmerman would be 3 classified in the state as being white. The 4 victim is black, the shooter is older than the 5 victim, you would find that in those cases it's 6 ruled to be justified a little more than a third 7 of the time. 34 percent of the time compared to 8 2.5 percent overall of all homicides.

9 So in the fact pattern in the Trayvon 10 Martin/George Zimmerman case, you know, that is 11 actually the fact pattern that we can observe in 12 the data that is most likely to yield a 13 justifiable homicide.

14 And even if you believe this sort of 3 15 to 1 ratio, which may very well be true, you know 16 like I said they had a convenience sample -- 17 cases. It's hard to generalize from that, but if 18 it's true, boy, you know, 34 percent compared to 3 19 percent when the facts are reversed is still an 20 enormous disparity.

21 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Yaki,
22 you have the last question. Your mic's not 23 working. There you go.

24 COMMISSIONER YAKI: This is for 25 Mr. Gerney. Doesn't the presence, availability,

2 access to a gun make the problems of implicit bias 3 in stand your ground cases even more problematic?

4 I mean, it's one thing to say, "I may 5 have an unconscious reflexive action against 6 someone because of their race." It's another 7 thing when you have that unconscious reflexive 8 action when you have a Smith and Wesson strapped 9 to your hip.

10 MR. ARKADI GERNEY: Yes. And it's 11 another thing when, in an increasing number of 12 states, concealed carry permit holders can bring 13 those guns into bars.

14 So, I think, yes, I think that's exactly 15 right. And when you look at, you know, generally 16 at crime data in the United States you find that 17 the United States is in the middle range in terms 18 of highly industrialized countries in terms of 19 crime. And in terms of violent crime there is one 20 place where it's way out of the normal range which 21 is murder and where it's 45 times higher. Firearm 22 murders, you know, 10 times higher.

23 And so, yes, a gun changes the equation.
24 And if we're, you know, if we're going to have a 25 -- if we're going to have a society where guns in 1

2 bars are the norm and we have stand your ground

3

laws, and we have extremely lax standards for who 4 can get a permit to carry a gun you're going to 5

have confrontations. I think there was a 6 reference to the alcohol-fueled confrontations

7 that happen all of the time in bars and other 8 venues that will have lethal consequences and 9 obviously that's bad for everybody involved,

10 whether it's determined to be a justified shooting

11 or an unjustified shooting, you've basically got 12 two lives ruined at the end of that equation.

13

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Well, thank you.

14

We want to appreciate all of the information that 15 you all provided us this morning. And thank you 16 for appearing, we're now going to take a brief

17 break for lunch. We will reconvene at 1:50, that is 10 minutes to 2:00 back here in this room.

18

19

Thank you, everybody.

9

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: It is 1:57 and we are coming back from the lunch recess for our afternoon panel. So just housekeeping for the panelists that are here, I assume many of you were probably here this morning, but in case you weren't you'll each have 8 minutes to speak. That will be governed by the series of warning lights here. Green mean starts. Yellow's going to be your two minute warning to begin to wrap up, and three is, please conclude. There will be an opportunity to elaborate when we as commissioners begin to ask you questions.

21

So let me briefly introduce the panelists in the order in which they will speak.

23

Our first panelist is Elizabeth Burke from the Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence.

25

Our second panelist is John Lott, who's 1

4

2

-- right there -- the Crime Prevention Research 3

Center.

4

Our third panelist is David LaBahn from the Association of Prosecuting Attorneys.

6

And our fourth panelist is Ilya Shapiro from the CATO Institute.

8

Our fifth panelist was not able to make it, Ronald Sullivan, who was from Harvard Law School. Well, I presume we'll get his statement for the record.

10

11

12

I'll now ask each of the panelists to swear or affirm that the information that you are about to provide us is true and accurate to the best of your knowledge and belief.

14

16

Is that correct?

17

PANELISTS: Yes.

18

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. Thank you.
Miss Burke, please proceed.

19

20

MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Thank you. And I would like to -- 21

22

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: You need to speak into the mic, please.

23

24

MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Thank you so much --

25

1

5

2

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: A little closer.

3

6

MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: So I didn't forget a tie today but I did bring a small electric fan that I had intended to place here, but I didn't want to set anything off.

7

In all seriousness --

8

9

COMMISSIONER YAKI: -- you just insulted our host air conditioning -- so -- 10

(Laughter)

11 12

13

14

MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: I'd like to thank the commission for convening these panels to study the legality and appropriateness of the stand your ground laws.

15

16

17

18

As you know my name is Elizabeth Burke and I'm an attorney with the Brady Center to Prevent Gun Violence. And I'm a litigator with our Legal Action Project.

19 20 21

22

The Brady Center was at the forefront of opposing Florida's enactment of stand your ground.
Which we called at the time, appropriately, a "shoot first" law.

23

25

The tragic shooting deaths of Trayvon
Martin and Jordan Davis really realized our fears about these laws. If a law is found to have a 2 pernicious and disparate impact on certain groups 3 in our society it must certainly be identified and 4 challenged.

5 Any law that creates a more dangerous 6 society should be viewed with suspicion and 7 subjected to the kind of thorough review that 8 we're doing here today.

9 So to go back a bit. Before stand your 10 ground in order to justify the use of force in 11 defense of self it was under the longstanding 12 Castle Doctrine, which was derived from common 13 law, a person was entitled to stand his ground in 14 his or her home where nobody else had the right to 15 be.

16 In public places, however, where 17 everyone has the right to be, there the law 18 imposed a reasonable requirement to avoid conflict 19 if possible.

20 The law also required that a defendant 21 prove that he believed force was necessary for his 22 defense and he needs to prove his force was 23 reasonable.

24 Those were part of the tenets of 25 common law of -- self-defense. There was logic to 2 those requirements, that a defendant should show 3 that his fear was reasonable, after all we 4 shouldn't allow someone to unnecessarily shoot 5 someone else simply because the shooter sort of 6 wrongly perceived himself to be in harms way.

7 Self-defense law was intended to 8 minimize conflict and preserve life. And those 9 are objectives that one would hope everyone could 10 agree on.

11 Stand your ground did away with these 12 sensible requirements. At its core the law allows 13 people to treat public spaces as their castles, 14 thereby attempts to eliminate the duty to avoid 15 conflict when possible.

16 As Trayvon Martin's killer George 17 Zimmerman knew about stand your ground laws it 18 could well be that these laws emboldened him to 19 continue to follow Trayvon even after the 911 20 dispatcher told him to stay in his car.

21 Additionally, under certain cases of 22 stand your ground the law's now give a stand your 23 ground shooter the right to use deadly force and 24 they are presumed to have a reasonable fear.

25 In other words, they don't really even

14 I think it's important to know the facts 15 of those cases. One is Beard. In the Beard case 16 those actually -- on Mr. Beard's property, three 17 individuals came on to his property in order to 18 steal his cow. And they told him "We're coming to 19 steal your cow or take your cow, and if you get in 20 our way we will kill you."

25 So that is one stand your ground case

2 that has been used to prop up stand your ground 3 and say this isn't really a departure from 4 self-defense, when in fact it is, because those 5 are pretty stark circumstances, I think everyone 6 agrees, if you're on your own property being 7 attacked by three people you have a right to 8 defend yourself.

9 Similarly in Brown -- in the Brown case 10 that Justice Harlan, we heard that famous quote 11 from Justice Harlan. In that case Mr. Brown had 12 been attacked by this other person twice before 13 and had been told that he was going to be killed 14 by him. So he had a gun at the ready.

15 And when that person came on to his work 16 site he, unfortunately, had to use the gun. Even 17 though he saw the person, was able to go get the 18 gun, came back and defended himself.

19 And the Supreme Court said at that 20 point, "You don't have to wait to be attacked." 21 Although, in that case Mr. Brown was being 22 stabbed.

23 So that's just background as we hear 24 these important quotes that are held up as well, 25 the law supports stand your ground. In fact, this

2 is a departure. So when we review changes to the 3 self-defense doctrine, it's important to look at 4 them in the context of our current gun laws and 5 realize that any consideration of relaxing 6 self-defense laws should be viewed in the context 7 of an increasing arming of American citizens.

8 There's been, as Mr. Gerney mentioned in 9 the last panel, a recent revision to who can carry 10 a concealed weapon in public. And as you know now 11 we have concealed carry's the law of the land in 12 almost every state. Many states have a 13 shall-issue regime in that there really isn't even 14 an opportunity for police to say "this is a 15 dangerous individual who should not have a gun."

16 More and more, even in constitutional 17 carry states, a person who's allowed to own a gun 18 can carry it anywhere they don't even have to have 19 a permit. They don't have to make an application.
20 And there's actually no point of contact for 21 police to try and prevent tragedy.

22 Finally, and I see my time is running 23 short. So when you look at stand your ground laws 24 within the combination of sort of the lax 25 concealed carry laws and the increasing

2 militarization and lethality of the weapons, and 3 then you combine that with the civil immunity 4 discussion we were having earlier where the stand 5 your ground laws shift the cost of violence. They 6 take away the potential risk to a shooter by 7 giving him civil immunity. And they -- therefore 8 they eliminate the generally accepted American 9 rule and leave really only the wealthy individuals 10 able to bring actions against shooters in an 11 effort to bring change to society.

12 So this -- this combination of shifting 13 immunity and lax concealed carry laws are 14 combining to make a very dangerous situation in 15 states that have also enacted stand your ground.

16 So, again, as I said we're very 17 interested in continuing the discussion on this.

18 And I'd like to get back quickly if I 19 could to the dramatic testimony about someone 20 punching you and you being able to then shoot 21 them. If we think about that in a land with 22 concealed carry, someone -- you know, a drunken 23 stranger punches you and you shoot them and you've 24 now taken a life, and I contend that's no small 25 matter for either party, right?

2 If you don't have a gun with you -- if 3 you don't have concealed carry allowed everywhere, 4 someone punches you, you have a black eye, and a 5 complaint for assault. You know, and that's 6 really what we need to think about when we put in 7 place laws that relax self-defense, but at the 8 same time increase access to guns we're just 9 creating a more dangerous society.

10 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thanks,
11 Miss Burke. Thank you.

12 Mr. Lott, you have the floor.

13 MR. JOHN LOTT: Well, thank you very 14 much Mr. Chairman and commissioners for inviting 15 me here today to talk.

16 I'm -- have a PowerPoint here that I 17 think may help a little bit. Let me just make a 18 couple of quick comments before I get into that.
19 And that is, people many times today have talked 20 about Florida as starting some new law, in fact, 21 there have been stand your ground type rules even 22 in common law going back to some states since 23 they've been part of the Union. California, for 24 example. In other states have essentially had 25 this is not some new experiment that's going on

2 for the first time here.

3 You know, there's a reason why states 4 have adopted stand your ground laws, it's not 5 something that just sprung up. There's issues 6 about certainty for the person who's using a gun 7 defensively when you go and you say that people 8 have to, you know, reasonably retreat as far as 9 possible you create doubt in people's minds. How 10 far should I actually have to retreat? And as the 11 appendix in my testimony to you all goes through a 12 number of cases where there's been real issues 13 about prosecutors bringing cases when, you know, 14 there's been differences, you know when -- 15 somebody's been knocked down three times and the 16 prosecutor said, "you still could have gotten up 17 and tried to run away a fourth time." And the 18 person thought that the third time he had been 19 knocked down, at that point he pulled out the gun 20 to go and defend himself.

21 Now, if we look at the Tampa Bay Tribune 22 data which has been talked a lot about today.
23 They have cases from -- that were brought from 24 2006 to 2014. Blacks make up about 16.7 percent 25 of Florida's population. They make up about 34

2 percent of the stand your ground cases. So 3 they're -- they're much more likely than the 4 average Floridian, blacks are, to go and use stand 5 your ground. And they're more successful when 6 they do use it. Blacks who use stand your ground 7 are 4 percentage points more likely not to face -- 8 not to have criminal charges than a white in that 9 same situation.

10 Earlier today among, for example on the 11 first panel -- he pointed out that -- what was 12 mentioned a couple of other times is that if you 13 look at the Tampa Bay Tribune data 67 percent of 14 those who killed a black faced no penalty, but 15 only 57 percent of people who killed whites faced 16 no penalty.

17 It appears to be discrimination going on 18 there. But what you have to take into account is 19 that it's primarily blacks who kill blacks, and 20 whites who kill whites in these stand your ground 21 cases.

22 So for example, if you look at the Tampa 23 Bay data, a little bit over 76 percent of the 24 cases for blacks involve a black killing a black.
25 In the case of whites, it's slightly over 80

2 percent of the time there.

3 And when you take that into account what 4 you find is that even though you're not likely to 5 you get a conviction when a black is killed, it's 6 because it's blacks who are killing blacks. And 7 in fact, blacks who use a stand your ground 8 defense are more successful in -- in bringing it 9 than whites are. Hispanics are actually the 10 highest in terms of success for doing that.

11 So, here's the bottom line. If you want 12 to go and declare discrimination in terms of 13 differential rates, in terms of who the vic -- who 14 was shot, why isn't it also discrimination in 15 favor of blacks and Hispanics in terms of the ones 16 who are the ones who shot in that case. I would 17 argue that it's pry not discrimination in either 18 of the cases.

19 If you look at the Tampa Bay Tribune 20 data one of the things that really doesn't get 21 talked is all the other differences across these 22 cases. So blacks who were killed were 26 23 percentage points more likely to be armed with a 24 gun than a white who was killed. Blacks were also 25 25 percentage points more often than whites to be

2 in the process of committing a robbery, home 3 invasion, or burglary.

4 You know these types of things as well
5 as other things suggest that maybe there was a 6 reason that they were shot. That there was a 7 reason why, you know, the black victim or whoever, 8 shot these individuals in order to protect 9 themselves.

10 And these differences continue to exist 11 even when you look at the, you know, blacks or 12 whites doing the shooting. Now I run some 13 regressions that I show you because the 14 overwhelming discussion here is just looking at 15 simple averages.

16 And as I say there's huge differences in 17 these cases. You know, whether the person who's 18 being shot had a gun for example, you'd think 19 would be important. Whether there were witnesses 20 there. Whether there was forensics evidence that 21 was involved.

22 You had -- there's lots -- it's a very 23 rich data set. There's lots of things you can try 24 to account for. And the thing is once you account 25 for those things there's no statistically

2 significant difference between either on the 3 victim's side or the people who are using the 4 stand your ground defense between whites and 5 blacks, they're essentially exactly the same in 6 terms of how the law is treated. Once you control 7 for all of the differences in the cases there.

8 Now one thing we've heard a fair amount 9 today about are justifiable homicides. And 10 there's some real problems with the data. First 11 of all the number of states and number of 12 jurisdictions that are reporting this have 13 increased fairly significantly over time.

14 I'll just show you. Here's just a 15 number of states. Basically it goes from, you 16 know, 29, 28 at the beginning, up to as high as 36 17 towards the end of the period. If you weight 18 those states by population it's actually even more 19 of a dramatic of an increase.

20 Plus you have to realize that for a lot 21 of these states you may only have one police 22 district in the entire state that's reporting the 23 data.

24 On average you end up having some place 25 between about 14 and 18 percent of police

2 departments in the country reporting justifiable 3 homicides. And it's been changing too in terms of 4 the composition. You're getting police 5 departments for more heavily minority areas 6 reporting towards the end of the period than you 7 did at the beginning. So if I see an increase in 8 justifiable homicides in total or if I see an 9 increase in justifiable homicides involving 10 minorities, a large part of that, if not all, is 11 simply due to the fact that you're having more 12 places reporting. And more places reporting for 13 areas where minorities are living.

14 Now I'm not going to go through Roman's 15 stuff right now, but I'll just mention the Texas 16 A & M study for a minute. Even they, in their 17 paper, recognize that there were many states that 18 had stand your grounds before 2005, but yet they 19 don't include any of them in their sample.
20 There's no explanation for why they include no 21 states before 2005. There's no explanation in 22 their paper for why they don't include crime data 23 or anything else before 2000.

24 Those are -- all seem like important 25 things. There's no explanation why they don't

2 include stand your ground cases which have been a 3 result of court decisions that were there. And 4 there have been other issues. Brady Campaign, 5 others have mentioned other gun control laws like, 6 right to carry, you argue it's very important in 7 terms of interpreting these laws whether you take 8 into account stand your ground rules.

9 This Texas A & M study had no other gun 10 control laws that were involved there. So there 11 are other problems that I could point to with 12 regard to it.

13 What happens when you try to look at the 14 whole period of time -- I have data that goes back 15 to '77. From '77 through 2012 for all of the 16 states that changed their laws during that entire 17 period of time. And I try to account for other 18 gun control laws. 13 in fact said -- ah, right to 19 carry laws. And when you try to do that this is 20 the change that you see in terms of murder rates 21 for example. I also have evidence there, you 22 know, before and after, so the line there is year 23 zero when the different states adopt the laws and 24 you can see how murder rates are falling in the 25 states that adopt stand your ground rates -- laws,

2 relative to the states that don't and how it was 3 beforehand.

4 I appreciate your time. Thank you very 5 much. But the bottom line is that the most 6 vulnerable people in our society are the ones who 7 are taking the greatest advantage of the stand 8 your ground laws and using it most successfully.

9 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you. Doctor
10 -- I'm sorry, Mr. Labahn.

11 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Thank you Chairman 12 Castro and members of the commission for the 13 opportunity to testify before you today.

14 My name is David LaBahn and I'm the 15 President and CEO of the Association of 16 Prosecuting Attorneys. We're a private nonprofit 17 whose mission is to support and enhance the 18 effectiveness of prosecutors in our effort to 19 create safer communities.

20 APA is the only national organization to 21 include and support all prosecutors, whether 22 appointed or elected, as well as their deputies 23 and assistants.

24 On behalf of APA I'm pleased to have the 25 opportunity to address the issues surrounding the 2 vast expansion of self-defense referred to as 3 stand your ground or Castle Doctrine laws. In our 4 materials we use the phrase Castle Doctrine 5 because we feel this legislative expansion 6 includes more than merely stand your ground, as 7 the expansion has taken the common law right to 8 protect ones home to any place that one has a 9 right to be.

10 As prosecutors we seek to do justice for 11 victims and to hold offenders accountable for 12 their actions, especially in cases where a life 13 has been violently ended whether by a firearm or 14 other deadly means.

15 During my tenure as the Director of the 16 American Prosecutors Research Institute we 17 convened a symposium of prosecution, law 18 enforcement, government, public health, and 19 academic experts from a little over 12 states.

20 This 2007 symposium was summarized in a 21 2008 report co-authored by my Vice-President, 22 Steven Jansen. In it we expressed serious 23 reservations about the potential impact of the 24 expanded legislation on youth aged 14 to 18.

25 Quoting from the report, "Specifically,

2 law enforcement considers this age group to be 3 particularly desensitized to violence and more 4 prone to quote "unprovoked violence" as a result 5 of being quote "disrespected." The Castle 6 expansion will not have a deterrent effect on 7 juveniles and young adults claiming to be 8 "disrespected" as a reason for occurrence of 9 assaults, but instead could create a legal shield 10 from criminal and civil immunity."

11 This concern from 2007 has been borne 12 out in the application of an otherwise neutral 13 statute because of the subjective nature of stand 14 your ground. Disparities in age, race, religion 15 and other cultural factors create situations where 16 the subjective perceptions of being in imminent 17 danger are due to disparities between individual 18 and now lead to senseless violence including the 19 taking of another's life.

20 Since 2009, APA has been tracking the 21 legislative progression of stand your ground and 22 assisted prosecutors who have been working to 23 enforce these expansive new laws. I have attached 24 to my testimony APA's Statement of Principles 25 regarding stand your ground laws as these laws

2 have raised a number of troubling and dangerous 3 concerns.

4 Prosecutors and their professional 5 associations have overwhelmingly opposed stand 6 your ground laws when they were in their 7 respective legislatures. The concerns expressed 8 include the limitation or even -- I'm sorry, the 9 limitation or elimination of prosecutors' ability 10 to hold violent criminals accountable for their 11 acts.

12 However, even with this opposition, many 13 states have passed stand your ground laws. Many 14 of these laws include provisions that diminish or 15 eliminate the common law "duty of retreat," 16 changed the burden of proving reasonableness to a 17 presumption, and provide blanket civil and 18 criminal immunity. By expanding the realm in 19 which violent acts can be committed with the 20 justification of self-defense. Stand your ground 21 laws have negatively affected public safety and 22 undermined prosecutorial and law enforcement 23 efforts to keep communities safe.

24 These measures have undermined standard 25 police procedures, prevented law enforcement from 2 arresting and detaining criminals, and have 3 stymied prosecutors deterring them from 4 prosecuting people who claim self-defense even 5 while killing someone in the course of unlawful 6 activity.

7 In some states, courts have interpreted 8 the law to create an unprecedented procedural 9 hurdle in the form of an immunity hearing which 10 effectively transfer the role of the jury over to 11 the judge. Moreover, because these laws are 12 unclear, there have been inconsistent applications 13 throughout the states and even within respective 14 states. Prosecutors, judges, police officers, and 15 ordinary citizens have been left to guess what 16 behavior is legal and what is criminal.

17 Even with the best efforts to implement 18 these broad measures, defendants, victims' 19 families and friends, investigators, prosecutors, 20 defense attorneys, trial courts, and appellate 21 courts have been forced into a case-by-case 22 analysis with no legal certainty as to what they 23 can expect once that life has been taken.

24 Stand your ground laws provide safe 25 harbors for criminals, prevent prosecutors from 1 2 bringing cases against those who claim 3 self-defense, even after unnecessarily killing 4 others. For example, in 2008, Florida case, a 29 5 year old drug dealer named Tavarious China Smith 6 killed two people in two separate incidents. The 7 first was drug-related, and the second was over a 8 retaliation for the first. Though he was engaged 9 in unlawful activity in both instances prosecutors 10 had to conclude that both homicides were justified 11 under Florida's stand your ground law.

12 Unfortunately, this example is not an 13 anomaly. A recent study concluded that the 14 majority of defendants shielded by stand your 15 ground laws had arrest records prior to the 16 homicide at issue.

17 Stand your ground began here in Florida 18 in 2005. And it is our position that the common 19 law did sufficiently protect people's rights to 20 defend themselves, their homes, and others. The 21 proper use of prosecutorial discretion ensured 22 that lawful acts of self-defense were not 23 prosecuted, and I've not seen any evidence to the 24 contrary.

25 After reviewing the legislative history

2 of the Florida provision, the very case used to 3 justify this broad measure, it involved no arrest 4 or prosecution. The law enforcement community 5 responded properly to the shooting and the 6 homeowner was never arrested or charged in his 7 lawful exercise of self-defense.

8 Because the provisions of stand your 9 ground measures vary from state to state, I'll 10 attempt to summarize some of the provisions which 11 have caused prosecutors difficulty in uniformly 12 enforcing the law.

13 First, the meaning of "unlawful 14 activity" needs to be clarified. Many states have 15 extended stand your ground laws to people who are 16 in a place where they have a right to be -- and 17 you have a right to be and non-engaged in unlawful 18 activity. Can a drug dealer defend his open air 19 drug market? I believe we already had that 20 discussion earlier. If the individual is a felon, 21 does that felon have a right to possess and kill 22 another with a firearm?

23 Secondly, immunity is rarely granted in 24 criminal law, with the few exceptions existing in 25 order to encourage cooperation with law enforcement and the judicial system. The 3 legislatures should remove the immunity provisions

1

2

4

and clarify that self-defense is what it's always 5 been under common law, it's an affirmative 6 defense.

7

Third, the replacement of the 8 presumptions with inferences eliminate -- would 9 eliminate many dangerous effects. This coupled 10 with an objective rather than a subjective 11 standard will improve accountability while 12 protecting the right to self-defense. And that's 13 subjective versus objective is a huge issue which 14 you've heard about today. That -- that is a key 15 provision that this commission should examine.

16

And finally, the statutes should be 17 amended to prevent the initial aggressor from 18 claiming self-defense. Some laws allow a person, 19 including Florida statute, to attack another with 20 deadly force and later use stand your ground to 21 justify the killing of the person he or she 22 attacked if that person responds with like force 23 and the initial aggressor cannot escape.

24

Taken together, I believe these reforms

25 to the various stand your ground laws will help

2 minimize the racial disparate and detrimental 3 effects and restore the ability of investigators 4 and prosecutors to fully enforce the law and 5 promote public safety, while continuing to respect 6 the rights of law-abiding citizens to protect 7 themselves and their families.

8 On behalf of the APA and the prosecutors 9 we represent, I want to thank you for holding the 10 hearing on the legislation -- and the key with 11 this legislation -- that this is legislation and 12 we would like to see things which promote -- 13 promote safe communities rather than promote the 14 use of deadly force.

15 The final issue that I'd like to address 16 would be the Jordan Davis case. In my opinion, 17 the Jordan Davis case is the loss of two lives not 18 one. Jordan, obviously was shot dead. This was 19 the loud music case. He was shot dead because 20 they were listening to rap music and because he 21 disrespected Mr. Dunn. At the same time, Dunn is 22 now, and we just heard today, is going to serve 23 105 years to life. His life is also gone. He was 24 celebrating, I believe, his son's wedding, he's now 25 going to spend the rest of his life in prison.

Because of stand your ground he felt he had that right and he's on tape saying, "I'm the victim here." That he had the right to take a gun and shoot dead another individual because, in the case of Dunn, he had been disrespected.

Thank you, sir.

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. Shapiro.

MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: Chairman Castro and distinguished commissioners, thank you for this opportunity to discuss stand your ground laws and potential racial disparities in the constitutional right to armed self-defense.

It's most appropriate that we're having this hearing in Orlando, which is so close to the tragic incident that ignited the current incarnation of this public policy debate.

Indeed, since George Zimmerman was found not guilty of killing Trayvon Martin stand your ground laws have been under attack. President Obama injected race into the discussion, claiming that the outcome would have been different had Martin been white.

Attorney General Holder then claimed stand your ground laws undermine public safety and 2 sow dangerous conflict in our neighborhoods. Both 3 want these enhanced self-defense laws reviewed, 4 which of course means repealed.

5 In my written statement I reviewed some 6 of the alleged racial disparities in the 7 application of these laws. Since I'm a 8 constitutional lawyer rather than a criminologist, 9 however, I'll leave that statistical analysis here 10 to my panel colleague John Lott. And also 11 PowerPoint's unconstitutional in most uses.

12 Instead let me provide you a legal 13 overview of stand your ground so everyone's on the 14 same page.

15 Not withstanding recent efforts to 16 politicize the issue there's nothing particularly 17 novel, partisan, ideological, racist, or otherwise 18 nefarious about these laws. All they do is allow 19 people to defend themselves without having a 20 so-called duty to retreat -- a concept that's been 21 part of U.S. law for over 150 years.

22 About 31 states now have some type of 23 stand your ground doctrine. The vast majority in 24 common law before legislators took any action.
25 Some, like California and Virginia, maintain stand your ground without any legislation.

Of the 15 states that have passed stand your ground since 2005, the year that Florida's model legislation was enacted, a majority had democratic governors. Leading progressives who signed such bills include; Jennifer Granholm, Janet Napolitano and Kathleen Sebelius (phonetic).

Louisiana and West Virginia passed them with Democratic control of both state houses. Even Florida's supposedly controversial law passed the state senate unanimously and split Democrats in the State House.

When Illinois strengthened its stand your ground law in 2004 State Senator Barack Obama joined in unanimous approval.

Conversely, many so-called "red states" do impose a duty to retreat in public. And even in more restrictive states such as New York courts have held that retreat isn't required at home or when preventing serious crime like rape or robbery.

Indeed, it's a universal principle that a person can use force when she reasonably believes it's necessary to defend against an

2 imminent use of unlawful force; Where there's no 3 duty to retreat, as in most states, she's further 4 justified in using deadly force if it's necessary 5 to prevent forcible felonies. That's the norm 6 throughout the country. Deadly force may be used 7 only in cases of imminent death or great bodily 8 harm that someone reasonably believes can only be 9 prevented by using such force.

10 It's not an easy defense to assert. In 11 almost all states it's a defense. It's not some 12 sort of immunity like Mr. LaBahn said. It's not a 13 get out of jail free card that you play and then 14 you're scot-free. And it certainly doesn't mean 15 that you can shoot first and ask questions later.

16 Everyday criminals assert flimsy
17 self-defense claims that get rejected by judges 18 and juries regardless of whether the given state 19 has a stand your ground law. These laws aren't a 20 license to be a vigilante or behave recklessly.
21 They just protect law-abiding citizens from having 22 to leave a place where they're allowed to be.

23 In other words, in most states, "would be"
24 victims of violent crime don't have to try to run 25 away before defending themselves. That's why the 2 debate over stand your ground--the real one, not 3 the phoney war that we've been having lately, is 4 nothing new. That's been going on back and forth 5 for centuries. In ancient Britain, when the 6 deadliest weapons were swords, a duty to retreat 7 greatly reduced violent incidents and blood feuds.

8 Firearms were also not as widespread in Britain 9 until recently. So British law continues to 10 reflect the historic deference to the 11 constabulary, by which the King owes a duty of 12 protection to his subjects.

13 That's obviously not part of our 14 tradition. In this country at any given time 15 about half the states have had stand your ground 16 laws. So today's split is well within historical 17 norms. Despite what gun prohibitionists claim, the 18 no retreat rule has deep roots in American law.

19 As Miss Burke alluded at the Supreme 20 Court stand your ground dates to the unanimous 21 1895 case of Beard versus the United States, in 22 which the great Justice John Marshall Harlan the 23 sole dissenter in Plessy (inaudible) v-Ferguson affirmed the 24 right to armed self-defense.

25 In places with a duty to retreat crime

2 victims can be imprisoned just for defending 3 themselves. And among those who often lost out 4 under that old rule were domestic violence victims 5 who turned against their assailants. Feminists 6 pointed out that "you could have run away" may not 7 work well when faced with a stalker or someone you 8 live with.

9 Stand your ground laws are thus designed 10 to protect law-abiding citizens. They're less 11 controversial in the context of a home. It's bad 12 enough to have your home burglarized but to then 13 have to hire an attorney and fend off a misguided 14 prosecutor or a personal - injury lawyer defending 15 an injured criminal is too much to ask.

16 That's how we have the Castle Doctrine - 17 recognized by all states -- which holds that you 18 don't need to retreat when your home is invaded.
19 When you extend that doctrine to public spaces - as 20 again, most states do - that's where you get stand 21 your ground.

22 What's been overlooked in the current 23 debate is that these laws only apply to people 24 under attack. So as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes 25 wrote for again a unanimous Supreme Court in

2 Brown versus United States, "Detached reflection 3 cannot be demanded in the presence of an uplifted 4 knife." And the facts of those cases, while 5 interesting, don't detract from what the legal 6 principles they stand for. Nearly a century later 7 and regardless of ones views on the scope of the 8 Second Amendment I don't think we can demand more 9 of crime victims trying to defend themselves.

10 Of course any self-defense rule bears 11 the potential for injustice. For example in a 12 two-person altercation one may be dead and the 13 other dubiously claim self-defense.

14 These cases, like, Trayvon Martin's 15 implicate the self-defense justification generally 16 rather than the existence of a duty to retreat.
17 If George Zimmerman was the aggressor then he 18 committed murder and has no self-defense rights at 19 all a whether the incidents took place in a stand 20 your ground state or not.

21 If Martin attacked Zimmerman the only 22 question is whether Zimmerman reasonably believed 23 that his life was in danger, not whether he could 24 have retreated. And if Zimmerman provoked the 25 confrontation, even if Martin eventually

2 overpowered him, he lost the protection of stand 3 your ground law.

4 And it's not even clear, whether he knew 5 about that law or that people that do 6 invoke it -- sure, their defense attorneys might, 7 but it's not that common that, people on 8 the street know that with any specificity.

9 Of course the Martin/Zimmerman
10 altercation is but one case and a high profile 11 incident where stand your ground didn't actually 12 play a part, so we shouldn't draw any policy 13 conclusions from it.

14 Hard, emotionally wrenching cases make 15 not only for bad law but for skewed policy 16 debates. While demagogues have used Trayvon 17 Martin's death to pitch all sorts of legislative 18 changes, what they really seem to be targeting, as 19 it were, is the right to armed self-defense.

20 With stand your ground laws, yes,
21 prosecutors may need to take more care to show 22 evidence to counterclaims of self-defense, not 23 simply argue that the shooter could have 24 retreated. So it's not surprising that a 25 prosecutor's organization would be against the law,

2 and it makes prosecutors work harder sometimes.

3 For those who value due process in 4 criminal justice, which should emphatically 5 include members of historically mistreated 6 minority groups, that's a feature not a bug.

7 Thanks again for having me. I welcome 8 your questions.

9 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you.

10 Mr. Labahn, is your opposition due to 11 the fact that you don't want to work harder?
12 Could you elaborate on --

13 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Not at all. Thank 14 you for asking me that question. It's not an 15 issue of working harder or not, the question is 16 what is right and just. And to sit here and 17 listen to things like, the Trayvon Martin had 18 nothing to do with stand your ground is completely 19 irrelevant.

20 Trayvon Martin had everything to do with 21 stand your ground legislation. In fact it could 22 not be more stark when one of the jurors was 23 interviewed and said, "I -- I -- We had to 24 reconcile this." Again, that subjective belief 25 that he was under attack. That Zimmerman's head

2 was being pounded, and the fact that he could use 3 the deadly force. That is right out of Florida's 4 stand your ground legislation. And even more 5 particularly Florida is dead on point that they 6 provide the use of force by aggressor within their 7 statute.

8 So again to sit here and listen that 9 aggressors cannot use stand your ground in Florida 10 is completely irrelevant and not accurate.

11 Thank you for allowing me to respond.

12 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: You're welcome.
13 Commissioner Yaki.

14 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Thank you very much,
15 Mr. Chair.

16 A couple of comments. One, I was struck 17 by Mr. Shapiro's reference to worrying about bad 18 law coming out of sensational cases when in fact 19 the stand your ground law was based on a 20 sensationalized case involving two people in their 21 RV in 2004, which was whipped up wildly in the 22 media. And as several articles show or it was 23 misrepresented quite amazingly to legislators.

24 But I wanted to talk -- ask Mr. LaBahn 25 something and that is, you point out the 2 difficulties in the prosecutor aspect of this but 3 isn't there another way to look at this is -- 4 isn't this in some ways a delegation of your 5 authority, the jury's authority, a judge's 6 authority, a cop's authority, to a private 7 individual to make decisions in a split second on 8 whether or not to take the life of someone?

9 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Yes. Yes, it is.
10 And that is something that -- it's the -- this is 11 the only place that I know that you could have 12 immunity where your activity is itself potentially 13 criminal.

14 So what you just said and the decision 15 to take a life is an incredible solemn decision.
16 I've had plenty of opportunities in my career to 17 carry a firearm, I've chosen not to do it because 18 I'm not willing to take that responsibility 19 because taking another's life I -- I don't know 20 that there is another decision that is that grave.

21 But what you've done with this law by 22 putting immunity in here, not an affirmative 23 defense, but literally immunity, you're telling 24 somebody that they can make a decision to do an 25 otherwise criminal act and then seek this hearing,

2 as we've heard earlier in the panel "I want to get 3 out real quick. I want to take a life. I want to 4 stand behind -- it cannot be properly
5 investigated. I cannot be detained. And I want 6 to be able to walk free on a life and death 7 decision." It is -- I don't know how to express 8 it, it is so extraordinary.

9 COMMISSIONER YAKI: I mean it sounds 10 like something where -- where an officer receives 11 hours, and hours of training on the use of deadly 12 force, on the use of determining whether someone 13 poses a threat to them or not, and here we are in 14 a situation where, essentially, in a public space 15 where there could be any one of us standing 16 around, you're giving the power to a single 17 individual with very little guidance on what 18 constitutes reasonable, what constitutes a threat, 19 what constitutes deadly, and letting them make a 20 decision.

21 MR. DAVID LABAHN: And thank you for the 22 comparison between the law enforcement individual, 23 which is only quasi immunity, and absolute 24 immunity for a private citizen.

25 So if a law enforcement officer takes

2 another life, first it must be within the course 3 and scope of the employment, that law 4 enforcement's employment. And in addition to that 5 it is an objective standard. Would a reasonable 6 officer in the same or similar circumstances have 7 been required to use deadly force.

8 So, yes, from -- this is extraordinary 9 to say without training, as you talk about very 10 little guidance, that's what I tried to say in my 11 statement. The courts here in Florida have 12 bounced all over the place trying to figure out 13 what this statute means, but with very -- with no 14 training you get absolute immunity.

15 COMMISSIONER YAKI: And let me just take 16 this one step further. And it goes to -- and in 17 the context of a law enforcement officer 18 committing such an act we have remedies within the 19 department of justice to examine the behavior of a 20 police department and whether or not in exercising 21 that they're doing it in a way that has -- that 22 has an unfair or disparate impact in terms of 23 race.

24 When you take that out -- out of that 25 equation and you're doing into a situation where

2 we have -- we're trying to get statistics that may 3 or may not get reported or -- you can't get to 4 that analysis about whether or not there is any 5 racial -- any -- any overall racial animus 6 involved to the extent that you can -- when a 7 police officer had -- by reporting for an entire 8 department justice can come in and determine 9 whether or not that person or that department is 10 acting in a way that is contrary to equal 11 protection.

12 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Yes. And that would 13 be the comparison here between the -- if you want 14 to call it the Zimmerman case or the Trayvon 15 Martin case and what's going on right now in 16 Ferguson. Because in Ferguson you're seeing all 17 that. You've got an officer under investigation 18 on that and you have the justice department 19 looking at the 1983 action, potentially, yes.

20 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Thank you.

21 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: If I could just 22 give you a quick quote from the President of the 23 National District Attorneys Association when he 24 was asked -- he stated that the stand your ground 25 laws basically give citizens more rights to use

1

43

2 deadly force than we give police officers and with 3 less review.

4 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Did you want to 5 say something, Mr. Lott?

6 MR. JOHN LOTT: Yeah. You know, with 7 regard to training, police have a much more 8 difficult job than civilians do. If you're ever 9 going to take a concealed carry class in Florida 10 one of the things that they're going to emphasize 11 is that you're not the police. The reason why 12 you're being given a gun is to maximize the 13 distance between yourself and the attacker there.

14 Police, when they come to a crime scene 15 can't simply brandish a gun and watch the criminal 16 run away. Police have to be willing to pursue the 17 individual and to come into physical contact with 18 them. And that's the vast majority of what police 19 training involves is, how do you deal with 20 somebody when you're coming into physical contact.

21 When you're talking about a woman who's 22 dealing with an attacker, or an elderly person, 23 the large strength differential that's going to 24 exist there is going to mean once you're in 25 physical contact you've completely lost control of 2 the situation at that point.

3 So to go and make comparisons between 4 the amount of training and -- that civilians and 5 police have, I think, is misleading.

6 I want briefly to say something about 7 the Zimmerman case. Everything that David was 8 just referring to in the case, you know, an 9 aggressor, the different statements that he made 10 were already true under the pre-existing 11 self-defense law in Florida. What changed was 12 whether or not there was a duty to retreat. The 13 duty to retreat was never brought up in 14 Zimmerman's case. In fact, even the prosecution 15 basically conceded that Zimmerman was on his back, 16 there was no place for him to go and retreat at 17 that point.

18 That was the change in the law. And to 19 go and reference the parts of the stand your 20 ground law that were already in effect there, and 21 I'm sure Ilya can probably say more about this 22 too, but it doesn't seem to me to be exactly on 23 target there.

24 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. LaBahn did you 25 want to respond?

2 MR. DAVID LABAHN: I don't see how you 3 separate one from the other. So when you put in 4 the inferences, the subjective, the no duty to 5 retreat and the very next section that -- that -- 6 you know, as he said, "Well they didn't -- they 7 didn't amend that." How do you say, "Well, we 8 gave all these new benefits and we expanded it, 9 yet we didn't limit the ability of the aggressor 10 to use force and so we didn't intend for 11 aggressors to use force," to me is absolute 12 nonsense.

13 I spent ten years in the legislature 14 working on a lot of different statutes, it is an 15 entire package. And the other thing that I think 16 is continually misleading is to say it's not a 17 stand your ground case because they didn't have a 18 stand your ground hearing.

19 There is a lot more to it than just a 20 stand your ground hearing. It's the -- it's 21 subjective, objective, presumptions, you can't 22 wrap an entire bill package and just say "This is 23 the only one we want to talk about, it's all 24 included."

25 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Miss Burke, did

2 you want to say something?

3 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Yeah, and just -- 4 I just wanted to bring up an additional point on 5 sort of historical self-defense coming -- growing 6 out of common law and then being sometimes 7 codified in state law. But there was always a 8 first aggressor limitation in, sort of, historical 9 self-defense law, in that you could not be the 10 first initiator of violence and then later turn 11 around and invoke self-defense.

12 And I think that's extremely important 13 when we're reviewing the Trayvon Martin case. I 14 mean, let's face it this was a very bad result on 15 every level. And the stand your ground laws in 16 Florida are clearly at issue in that case.

17 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner
18 Narasaki.

19 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Thank you,
20 Mr. Chair.

21 So my question is to Mr. Lott and 22 Mr. Shapiro. It's a series of questions that are 23 connected. So first is, I'm interested to 24 understand whether you agree that it's important 25 to have accurate comprehensive data to determine whether in fact equal protection is affected or 3 not affected by this new law.

1

2

4

6

7

8

10

I know that -- that Mr. Lott is very critical of some of the analysis so I'm interested in particular whether the federal government should require data collection for -- connected to being able to get federal law enforcement funding, and if not, what would you do to correct the data situation?

11

13 14

15

16

Second is, do you support clarifying the law that shooters who want the benefit of stand your ground should not be pursuing the person that they are shooting, that once they begin to pursue them they become the aggressor, that they lose protection of the law?

17

19 20

21

The third is, I'm interested in understanding whether you believe that people should be able to claim immunity for civil liability when a person accidentally kills someone who's an innocent bystander?

22

24

25

And whether you have concerns about the fact that now that you've increased the area and circumstances under which someone can start shooting other people, whether that in fact is an

2 increased danger.

3 And the last is, are either of you 4 concerned by the that fact Mr. Zimmerman, given 5 his history seemed to have legal access to a gun?

6 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I'll -- start.
7 And I'll defer the very first question about data 8 to John, because that's clearly his bailiwick.

9 And I'll start with the last question 10 because it goes to show how a lot of the 11 questioning I think conflates a lot of different 12 issues. Stand your ground laws are a very 13 kind of narrow technical/legal point.
14 Self-defense justifications are more broad and 15 affirmative defense are also more broad.

16 Gun regulations and restrictions which 17 a whole other sort of debate that's, 18 beyond the scope of this hearing. You know, stand 19 your ground laws are very narrow and very 20 technical. The only difference in stand your ground 21 jurisdictions versus non-stand your ground 22 jurisdictions is what do you have to do if you're 23 being attacked and it's possible to retreat 24 If it's not possible to retreat, like in

2 the Zimmerman/Martin case then it's only about 3 whether, Zimmerman -- committed the 4 attack or whether he reasonably believed that his 5 life was in danger, these sorts of considerations 6 are concomitant to traditional self-defense 7 considerations, not stand your ground laws in 8 particular.

9 On the immunity point. For civil 10 liability, well I think the laws there haven't 11 really changed. If you're engaged in reckless or 12 willfully gross negligent behavior you can be 13 liable even if you're not intending to hurt 14 somebody else.

15 But if you're acting reasonably or,
16 -- exercising your right to 17 self-defense, then, no, you shouldn't have 18 liability. So the question the familiar 19 question under tort law that exists in both stand 20 your ground and non-stand your ground 21 jurisdictions, again -- so if tort law needs to be 22 changed somehow or recodified that's a separate 23 issue from, the stand your ground law 24 and its operation.

25 And as to shooters shouldn't be pursuing

2 or aggressors who should lose the right to stand your 3 ground, absolutely, I agree with that. And I 4 think that most if not all states have that in 5 their stand your ground laws. And that's why the 6 911 operator told Zimmerman not to pursue.

7 And that, as John was saying, is one of 8 the major differences between people who lawfully 9 -- citizens, private citizens who lawfully carry 10 guns and the police -- the police have to engage 11 and citizens do not.

12 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: I'm sorry, you 13 might have said it and I missed it, but did you 14 answer my question about whether you were troubled 15 that he had an access to a gun?

16 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: Oh, Zimmerman?

17 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Yes.

18 MR. JOHN LOTT: I can answer that --

19 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I'm sorry?

20 MR. JOHN LOTT: I can answer that.

21 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: -- I 22 don't know the full facts of his -- you know, I 23 understand that he had some alcohol issues in the 24 past. I don't know if he had committed any 25 felonies or done anything that was -- rose to the 2 level of being deprived of a particular civil 3 right to armed self-defense. You know, I'm -- you 4 know, given what's -- what's happened since maybe 5 there is more history to that. But in the 6 abstract, you know, I guess, no.

7 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: So -- and 8 perhaps Mr. Lott would like to, I think, correct 9 your understanding of what the Florida law says on 10 civil liability. Unless the people that have been 11 testifying all morning are wrong in how they 12 characterized it to us.

13 MR. JOHN LOTT: Yeah, well I'm not a 14 lawyer so I'll let Ilya speak for himself on that.

15 I -- I can answer the empirical 16 questions that you raised. You know, to me the 17 issue of Zimmerman getting a permit or not, you 18 know, obviously Florida has given out -- what is 19 it, like 2.6 million concealed handgun permits -- 20 or permits to 2.6 million people since they first 21 started being issued on October 1, 1987.

22 Right now there's like 1.4 million
23 people who actively have permits. The average 24 person who's had permits over that time has had a 25 permit for something like 12 and a half years. So

2 you've -- 2.6 million people for all of those 3 years. Florida, their website for example, has 4 detailed data on revocations over time. If you 5 look at firearms revocations between January 1, 6 2008 and the end of 2011, they had 4 firearm 7 revocations. But, revocations for any type of 8 firearms related violation. That comes to 9 revocation rate of about 1/10,000th of 1 percent 10 in terms of the permits that were there.

11 If you look at the entire period of time 12 from 1987 on there was 168 revocations. You're 13 talking about something that's akin to about a 14 thousandth of a percent.

15 So the bottom line to me -- and most of 16 those revocations were for things that had 17 absolutely nothing to do with violence. Most of 18 them were people accidentally carrying a permit 19 concealed handgun into a gun-free zone. Or people 20 forgetting to have their permit with them when 21 they would be stopped by police or something.

22 And, so the issue here is are there -- 23 is there a safety problem in terms of people with 24 permits somehow getting permits improperly, is it 25 something that you can even measure.

1

2

If you look at firearms revocation rates for Floridians it's actually --

4

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: I -- I actually just wanted to know whether you're troubled or not, I don't need the whole --

7

MR. JOHN LOTT: No, I'm not troubled in general because if you look at the way the Florida's system's working it seems to work incredibly well. I mean --

10

11

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Well, 4 revocations out of 2,000 and whatever and there's no problem, okay.

13

14

MR. JOHN LOTT: Million. So the -- the rate that permit holders in Florida are involved in crimes with their permit concealed handgun is 1/7th the rate that police officers end up getting into trouble for firearms related violations.

18

19

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Ah --

20

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Could he answer the data question --

21

22

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Yeah, would you please.

23

24

MR. JOHN LOTT: Yeah, I'm sorry. The data question, look more data's great. Okay. I 25

2 use data all the time on stuff. I don't mind 3 having data. The only thing I would ask is that 4 if you're going to have data it needs to be more 5 than just justifiable homicide and race.

6 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Right. So you 7 would support tying federal funding to trying to 8 get better data, is the question?

9 MR. JOHN LOTT: I'll leave that up to 10 the politicians on how to -- what's the best way 11 to try and go and do that. I'm just saying, sure 12 there's a benefit from having more data in terms 13 of being able to study things.

14 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner
15 Heriot, then Commissioner Achtenberg. And do any 16 of the commissioners on the phone want to ask a 17 question?

18 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Yes, Kirsanow
19 would like one question.

20 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay.

21 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Kladney would 22 like a question.

23 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. So
24 Commissioner Heriot you're next, followed by 25 Commissioners' Achtenberg, Kirsanow, and Kladney.

1

2

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Thank you,

3

Mr. Chairman. I actually have just a quick 4 question for Dr. Lott.

5

The previous panel, Dr. Roman, criticized an aspect of your work and I just 7 wanted to give you a chance to comment on that.

6

8

MR. JOHN LOTT: Sure. And I appreciate

9 that. Look, there are multiple things that John 10 brought up. One of the things that he was -- 11 brought up was the superiority of using the 12 justifiable homicide data for the United States as 13 a whole versus the Tampa Bay Tribune data that was 14

there, saying that it was, you know, an arbitrary 15 quote "selective sample" that had been done for 16 the Tampa Bay Tribune.

17

The Tampa Bay Tribune article is 18 essentially the universe of stand your ground

19 cases. It's not a sample. It has all the cases 20 there. The problem that you have, if you want to 21 talk about real sample issues, that's what the 22 justifiable homicides -- in some years you have 14

23 percent of the police jurisdictions in the country

24 reporting justifiable homicide rate data. And 25 there's even massive problems as Bill was talking

2 about earlier in response to questions from 3 Commissioner Heriot, with regard to the fact that 4 they don't go back and correct these things 5 systematically. There's all sorts of errors even 6 in that small percent that you have there. And so 7 the question is, what places report? Why did they 8 report it? What are the errors in their data 9 that's there?

10 But here's -- here's the big problem and 11 Commissioner Castro when you read that quote and 12 as the end of it there it actually gets the 13 opposite results, if you have a copy of his paper 14 and I don't know if for some reason it didn't get 15 up there. If you look at Table III of his 16 reports, what he has is, he has a column for the 17 rate of justifiable homicides for black-on-white, 18 white-on-black, for non-stand your ground states, 19 and for stand your ground states. If you look at 20 the coefficients for the non-stand your ground 21 states essentially, when a white kills a black he 22 has a coefficient of like 41, and the coefficient 23 of 7 for blacks killing whites. So it's a ratio 24 of about 5.4 to 1. So it's saying whites who kill 25 blacks are 5.4 times more likely to be found

2 justified in terms of the homicides than blacks.

3 But then if you look at the stand your 4 ground states the ratio of the coefficients 5 actually falls to 4. So rather than exacerbating 6 it, he simply doesn't -- didn't read his 7 coefficients correctly.

8 And so -- also when he talks about 10 to 9 1, his regressions actually show 4 to 1 difference 10 for stand your ground rather than the 10 to 1 that 11 he was saying. And the problem that you have 12 there is that when you bring up the type of things 13 that Commissioner -- a commissioner earlier was 14 asking him about the 3 to 1 differences just in 15 terms of whether the person was armed. You pretty 16 much can explain away the differences even just 17 for one of the factors that are there.

18 And so -- and he also doesn't take into 19 account whether all of the things that are 20 statistically different in the right way and makes 21 mistakes there in that too.

22 So his results actually showed the 23 opposite of what he was claiming. Rather than the 24 stand your ground laws exacerbating it, it 25 actually reduces the difference in the coefficient

2 between black and whites that are there.

3 And, you know, there are other issues
4 we've been talking about with the general issues 5 about justifiable homicide data. He does not 6 attempt to account for any of the changes that are 7 occurring over time in the data. He doesn't 8 adjust it for the different places that are 9 reporting over time. Lists -- he takes the data 10 as if he doesn't understand any of the problems in 11 the underlying data.

12 I'll just give you one other trivial
13 example. As I mentioned, over time more states 14 are reporting the data. You have more 15 jurisdictions reporting the data. Well, if stand 16 your ground states tend to be adopting the, you 17 know, relatively later in the period compared to 18 the other states that are there just by having the 19 time trend in there you're going to end up having 20 them have higher rates of justifiable homicide 21 than the earlier ones would be. And, you know, 22 that's just a simple example of the types of 23 biases that you create in there if you don't try 24 to de-trend these things in terms of things like 25 the number of places that are reporting.

1

2

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: And just let me

3 add for the record since Dr. Roman's not here

4 right now we're going to ask him to supplement his 5 response based on what you've explained today -- 6

MR. JOHN LOTT: I wish we could have 7 debated on here. I've been emailing your staff --

8

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Well, we're going to -- well, this is not a debate, this is a hearing. But maybe one day we'll have a debate

9

10

11 and you all could come in and we'll sell popcorn, 12 but we're going to ask Dr. Roman to have the 13 opportunity to present us with data along the 14 lines of responding to what you said that way we 15 have a complete record when we evaluate the data.

16

Commissioner Achtenberg.

17

COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: Thank you,

18

Mr. Chairman. Mr. LaBahn I'm curious, does the 19

Prosecutors Association typically take the kind of 20 definitive position that you've taken with regard to stand your ground laws based on bad data, bad 22 facts, and the fact that, you know, there's really 23 not a departure here from the common law, at least 24 according to some lawyers.

21

25

I mean, I was quite frankly, quite

2 intrigued by the position of the Prosecutors 3 Association, understanding as I do that you're not 4 part of the group of typical suspects, you know, 5 to be taking the position that you're taking.

6 I'm wondering how you could explain to 7 us how it is that your organization came to take 8 this position?

9 And then, secondly, could you talk to 10 the commission about what it is you think the 11 commission might be in a position to do about 12 something that you seem to see as egregious as 13 your prior testimony indicates.

14 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Okay. Thank you. So 15 first the question of taking legislative positions 16 based upon bad data or -- or something in that way 17 and also my organization itself.

18 First, on behalf of APA, The Association 19 of Prosecuting Attorneys, our National 20 Association, we do not have a position on stand 21 your ground laws. We have the Statement of 22 Principles that is attached to my materials, but 23 we do not either support or oppose, because as I 24 said in my testimony, a lot of the states have 25 implemented the laws, there's a separation of 4 powers, once legislature passes this, the Executive Branch needs to enforce it.

As it relates specifically for instance here in Florida. Florida to Florida prosecutors
-- the State Association opposed the legislation and the legislature went ahead and passed it anyway. And the majority of the states that have passed legislation back then, generally law enforcement has been opposed to it. The reason why, it isn't necessarily based on data, it is -- an example, what happened here -- this is legislation searching for a problem, instead of legislation addressing an issue or a problem.
Having --

Even hearing that California is a stand your ground state surprises me immensely. I was a 10 year prosecutor there in that state, I prosecuted plenty of homicides and lots of violence, especially in Southern California.

I then spent 10 years at the State Association. I was running the California District Attorneys Association when the proponents of this legislation -- it was 2006, they brought it to Sacramento and they tried to put the bill

2 in. We laughed at it. We laughed that you're 3 going to have criminal immunity and civil immunity 4 for taking somebody else's life. We thought it 5 was almost funny that -- you've got to be kidding 6 me.

7 So to hear it's a stand your ground 8 state, I would submit to you it's not. What 9 happened in California, it went to its very first 10 committee, which was the judicial committee and 11 the judicial committee it never even got a motion 12 because the trial lawyers had control of that and 13 you're going to give civil immunity to -- the 14 legislation was over.

15 What we instead would say is, and I 16 would ask this committee is, this isn't is an 17 entire legislative package, it's not as narrow.
18 You could have changed the Florida law or it could 19 have been done by just putting in a duty to 20 retreat or wiping out that duty to retreat.

21 But that's instead not what this was.
22 This is an entire package including the -- and 23 we've talked about subjective versus objective.
24 In the world of a prosecutor that's a huge change.
25 That's not a minor little detail. In fact we've 2 got to prove that beyond a reasonable doubt. The 3 -- any place that the individual has a right to 4 be, that's a vast expansion when you take Castle, 5 which had been the home or even some of them even 6 look at home, a place of employment, and some have 7 even extended it to cars.

8 But then when you legislatively say 9 "anyplace that you have a right to be," that's, 10 again, a very vast expansion and a very big 11 concern as it relates to how is this going to 12 actually end up in the courts.

13 The presumption. The presumption of 14 reasonableness in your own home. You don't need 15 to have any sort of reasonable fear under this 16 legislation and this draft. It was -- it was 17 instead said if it's in the house you can shoot 18 anybody no matter what you feel about them. If 19 they don't have a right to be in your home you can 20 shoot them dead. That presumption is 21 extraordinary, you know?

22 And then, finally, as we just discussed 23 the immunity. Just as when you are working to 24 -supplement your record, I would ask that you look 25 at the entirety of the Florida legislation and see

2 whether or not it's as has been suggested here 3 that they just added duty to retreat or whether 4 they added the four pieces. And that's what we've 5 been doing on behalf of the Association is we have 6 been tracking -- we've been working with various 7 states on what does their legislation mean. And 8 it's all up to each State Association whether they 9 support it or oppose it or even the individual --

10 But we have specific columns, if you go 11 to our website, of the states that have done the 12 expansion, and on the four points which states did 13 which expansion.

14 And that's why we start our research at 15 2005, because I would submit to you prior to 2005 16 the concepts that have been talked about today, 17 especially these immunity provisions, presumptions 18 and such, didn't exist before this legislative 19 piece came forward.

20 So that is the reason why we did it. We 21 would -- and always on behalf of prosecutors I'm 22 now working in Washington, we're always ready to 23 come to the table. There are plenty of problems 24 within our justice system. We like to have the 25 data behind it. We like to know what the problem is.

And, especially, on behalf of prosecutors we're trying to make things safer.
And that's why we continually come to the table to try to make the justice system work better. Not easier, not faster, but better. And work on legislative reforms.

This has never been one that we have seen to be a problem, and hence need to work on a reform.

ILYA SHAPIRO: Can I clarify something?

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Sure.

ILYA SHAPIRO: Mr. LaBahn said that he was surprised that I classified California as a stand your ground state. As I think I was explicit, a lot of the stand your ground states are common law stand your ground states.

And among the 31 or so states that you count as -- that I count as stand your ground states, there's a lot of variation in the legislative package or what the common law protects or what have you. So I don't remember the California specifics right now, but whether it's, you know, just protecting in your car or 2 place of employment, like Mr. LaBahn said, those 3 31 states include protections beyond the home.

4 That's what basically works as stand your ground, 5 and that's why this innovation in the law which as 6 I said isn't an innovation it's 150 years old, is 7 just pushing the normal Castle Doctrine in the 8 home which certainly doesn't --

9 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: So you're 10 talking about an expansion of the places from 11 whence one can claim the stand your ground 12 defense. Is that what you're talking about in 13 terms of California?

14 Do we have the subjective standard? Do 15 we have immunity?

16 COMMISSIONER YAKI: It's -- it's -- a --

17 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Go ahead.

18 Commissioner Yaki, go ahead, please.

19 COMMISSIONER YAKI: I need -- I need to 20 -- with all due respect to Mr. Shapiro that -- 21 he's wrong. It's not -- California is not a stand 22 your ground state. There are -- there are 23 instances in -- there are some very vague jury 24 instructions that talk about the fact that if 25 you're being -- if someone's trying to kill you,

2 you don't have to sit there and be killed, but it 3 doesn't -- it's not a situation that -- that 4 imposes the same kind of immunity from liability.
5 They're all different -- they're all different -- 6 this is where -- this is where in some ways we're 7 conflating the idea of self-defense with stand 8 your ground. It is not a stand your ground state.

9 It is like many other states, a 10 self-defense state, but California Supreme Court 11 has never opined to this day the extent to which 12 that extends beyond -- beyond the home.

13 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner --

14 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I've never -- sorry.

15 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: No, go ahead.

16 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I've -- I've never 17 claimed that California is a stand your ground 18 state, if we're defining stand your ground as 19 accepting the package legislation modeled after 20 Florida. That's certainly not what I intended to 21 mean.

22 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner
23 Achtenberg, I'm sorry, I cut you off.

24 COMMISSIONER ACHTENBERG: No, that's 25 fine Mr. Chairman. That clarification is 2 sufficient.

3 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay.

4 Commissioner Kirsanow.

5 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: I think that

6 Commissioner Kladney had his hand up first.

7 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. You have

8 very good eyesight Commissioner Kirsanow.

9 (Laughter).

10 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Such courtesy, I

11 have to tell you.

12 I'd like to ask. I think it's 13 Mr. LaBahn, from the prosecutors office and 14 anybody else on the panel. I just want to get 15 this clear, when we refer to the Florida statute,

16 and I'd like to refer to the Florida statute

17 because I think from the testimony that I've heard

18 there's like -- like every state there's little 19 changes to statutes all over -- that are similar 20 in nature, but they aren't exactly the same, but 21 -- so it's my understanding that the stand your

22 ground law allows an eggshell shooter to walk away

23 from a shooting because their psychological

24 perception of the world and individuals for the 25 shooting, whatever it was, regardless of what 1

2 society believes to be a reasonable threat.

3

Is that correct?

MR. DAVID LABAHN: Yes. Especially if you are describing that eggshell, and because it's a subjective standard there still is a reasonable -- does that person reasonably believe that an eggshell person who believes that they're under imminent danger has the right to use deadly force.

MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: And can I just -- can I expand --

COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: Yes, in a second. Let me just ask -- add one more question there.

And then a police officer who is not elected by the people makes a decision as to whether an arrest takes place or not?

MR. DAVID LABAHN: Yes. Again, specifically in the Florida statute, which hasn't been addressed here, but it's extraordinary. The Florida statute flat out says that -- and it gets it backwards. It says that -- let me find the exact language.

"As using this subsection -- and it's 776.032 No.1. "As used in this subsection, the term criminal prosecution includes arresting,

2 detaining, custody, and charging or prosecuting 3 the defendant."

4 And then in Number 2 it comes forward
5 referencing Number 1. It says, "A law enforcement 6 agency may use standard procedures for 7 investigating the use of force as described in 8 subsection 1, but the agency may not arrest the 9 person for using force unless it determines that 10 there is probable cause that the force that was 11 used was unlawful."

12 And then 3, which was talked about, 13 there's attorney fees and court costs and 14 everything else if that arresting -- if that 15 agency makes a mistake.

16 This turns the law enforcement agency, 17 and as you said, the officer, yes, it makes that 18 patrol officer almost judge/jury and it's not 19 their job. They ought to be investigating the 20 shooting, not getting to the point of a probable 21 cause determination, especially right after the 22 shooting itself.

23 And that's why you have situations like 24 was seen on TV with George Zimmerman, they -- they 25 had initially taken him into custody, and then

2 they took his cuffs off and had him walk home -- 3 or let him go home.

4 It puts the agency in a very strange 5 position. And they really ought not to be making 6 that decision, especially at the time of the 7 shooting. It ought to be properly investigated 8 and then submitted. That's the way the process 9 should go and it really should never be the patrol 10 officers trying to make some sort of decision at 11 the scene. "Do we arrest him, not arrest him, do 12 we have probable cause, or not have probable 13 cause?"

14 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Miss Burke, you 15 had something that you wanted to add?

16 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Yes, I did just 17 want to draw attention to the fact that 776.012 is 18 the reasonable expectation that you -- you know, 19 you believe that your life is in danger.

20 But, 776.013, which is a presumption of 21 fear in the home goes even -- even went a step 22 further under Florida's stand your ground law, in 23 that if you are in your home and you shoot and 24 kill someone you're presumed to have a fear. So 25 you don't actually have to be afraid at all.

2 There is a legal presumption created which then 3 the state would have to overcome.

4 So that just takes things a step 5 farther. And certainly much farther than any 6 common law definition of self-defense.

7 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner
8 Kladney, are you done?

9 COMMISSIONER KLADNEY: I am,
10 Mr. Chairman.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay. Now it's 12 your turn Commissioner Kirsanow.

13 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Thanks, 14 Mr. Chair. I would also like to thank all of the 15 panelists this has been very informative.

16 I'm willing to be persuaded that stand 17 your ground is a bad idea. And I've got a great 18 deal of interest in and respect for Mr. LaBahn's 19 perspective for example. Although, those of us 20 who are in the first lines of defense for our 21 families and neighborhoods like mine I'm not quite 22 yet persuaded that standing alone, stand your 23 ground is a bad idea. But that's not the -- 24 that's not the commissions charge, it's whether 25 stand your ground results in discriminatory

2 treatment of those involved in the confrontation 3 or of an equal protection violation.

4 So I've got a couple of questions for 5 Mr. Shapiro. First, Mr. Shapiro, are you aware of 6 any evidence that any quote - unquote "stand your 7 ground legislation" that's been enacted has been 8 done so with any discriminatory intent?

9 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I'm not.

10 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Are you aware of 11 any stand your ground legislation that is not 12 (inaudible) neutral?

13 MR. ILYA SHAPIRO: I am not.

14 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: And Mr. Lott you 15 talked about coefficients with respect to -- I 16 can't recall whose data it was. I think it was 17 Mr. Roman.

18 Do you know whether or not the Tampa Bay 19 Tribune data or any other data show whether or not 20 or were just aggregated by, for example, the 21 effective concealed carry laws, use of drugs by 22 the attacker, whether the attacker had a weapon or 23 the type of weapon that he had or any other things 24 that may have had a bearing on a one-to-one 25 correlation in black to white statistics in this

2 issue?

3 MR. JOHN LOTT: Well, the Tampa Bay
4 Tribune data had very detailed data on whether a 5 weapon was present, what type of weapons were 6 present, who initiated the attack, what types of 7 data was available, whether you had witnesses, 8 forensic information that was there, what property 9 it occurred on, when it occurred, what time it 10 occurred. It has very detailed information on 11 those things.

12 You know, with regard to the Roman 13 stuff, I'll just mention the coefficients. I 14 reproduced his table -- in fact, I just have a 15 screen shot in my report, so if you want to look 16 at it you can see it in my report.

17 COMMISSIONER KIRSANOW: Thank you.

18 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Any other
19 commissioner -- Commissioner Timmons-Goodson, go 20 ahead.

21 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Thank you
22 very much, Mr. Chair.

23 As I sat here it occurred to me, I was 24 wondering if any of our witnesses would care to 25 offer any thoughts on how they see implicit bias

2 as it relates to these stand your ground laws.

3 MR. DAVID LABAHN: I'll -- I'll go first 4 on that. That's why I'm most troubled by the 5 subjective standard is the implicit bias is going 6 to play into that -- I'm going to say every time.
7 It is -- what that person is perceiving, and 8 let's go with the Jordan case, because that's the 9 verdict that came back, and ultimately even with 10 stand your ground, after a second trial, the jury 11 came back and said, "No, we don't think that it 12 was imminent or reasonable." But it was -- the 13 conversation -- it was a white older male shooter 14 and young black victim. And the fact that there 15 were 4 in the minivan when they were playing the 16 music. The -- the -- the shooter was in there 17 first. The van comes in, they're playing loud 18 music. He calls it rap music, thug music, I think 19 there's different things that this panel has said.
20 And he asked the person to please turn the music 21 down. And they initially did. And then they 22 turned the music back up. And that's when now 23 things started to escalate. Again he asked them 24 to turn the music back down. This time they did 25 not. He started yelling at him. And Jordan

7 I submit to you that I have no idea 8 about Dunn and his background. But whether it's 9 implicit or explicit, but we'll go with the 10 implicit bias -- you have an age difference, you 11 have a different taste in music, and you 12 absolutely have a different amount of respect 13 towards the individuals. No respect to an older 14 individual and also the willingness to use 15 particular language and get closer in an 16 individuals face.

25 That's your implicit versus explicit.

2 But for someone who's not comfortable with that, 3 and that different sort of cultural feeling they 4 can feel that that's an aggressive movement toward 5 them. And because here we're talking about the 6 use of deadly force that likely can take 7 somebody's life.

8 So the more different the individuals 9 are the more likely that this provision will come 10 into place. And that's why when you look at the 11 shootings that have got a lot of attention there 12 has been both a racial and an age difference.

13 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Thank 14 you.

15 Mr. Lott.

16 MR. JOHN LOTT: Yeah, with regard to the 17 implicitness or explicitness you can look at the 18 data rather than an anecdotal story. And because 19 the Tribune data has the age, has the many other 20 differences there with regard to the individuals.
21 All the differences that were just raised are in 22 -- essentially in the Tribune data set.

23 So you can control for those to see 24 whether they make a difference. And in fact, even 25 after you control for those things you find no

2 statistically significant difference in terms of 3 the way -- the sentence depends upon either the 4 race of the victims or the race of the person who 5 fired the gun.

6 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON: Are you
7 saying that you can control for implicit bias --

8 MR. JOHN LOTT: Well, it should be -- if 9 there's implicit bias it should be observed in the 10 final outcomes, right? It should be observed in 11 terms of whether or not somebody's less likely to 12 end up with punishment than another person. If 13 he's saying that there's implicit bias because an 14 older white male is going to be given deference in 15 this case, then it should affect the probability 16 that that older white male's going to end up 17 facing a penalty or not.

18 COMMISSIONER TIMMONS-GOODSON:
19 Mr. LaBahn it looked like you wanted to say 20 something.

21 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Yes, if -- if I may.
22 I was not suggesting that older white males are in 23 any way always going to be bias towards young 24 black males. Instead what was going on in my mind 25 and I think we heard this statistic was 34 percent

2 of the cases where the age difference, when the 3 individual was older and you had the racial 4 difference, that 34 percent of those cases in fact 5 were deemed to be justified. That's where I 6 suggest is -- the implicit bias comes in when you 7 move it from being an objective standard, would a 8 reasonable person in the same or similar 9 circumstances have acted in that way. To the 10 subjective standard is, what did that individual 11 believe. That -- once you've got a subjective 12 standard now the implicit biases weigh in on that 13 decision to take another life.

14 MR. JOHN LOTT: The reason --

15 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Could I --

16 MR. JOHN LOTT: -- the reason why you 17 don't take a statistic just like that by itself is 18 there's so many other things that differ across 19 these cases. Whether it's somebody's armed, who 20 initiated it, other aspects, you know, whether 21 it's black-on-white or white-on-black. Those are 22 the reasons why you use the whole data set to try 23 to control for those other factors.

24 And I'm saying, when you control for 25 them the data set's publically available or you can

2 run your own regressions on it.

3 When you use all of the data that's 4 available on the Tampa Bay Tribune data set there 5 you don't find any statistically significant 6 difference in the outcome. You may think by just 7 looking at one average there, you can infer 8 something there, but you're leaving out a huge 9 number of other factors that the Tampa Bay data 10 set records.

11 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Yaki,
12 and then Commissioner Heriot.

13 COMMISSIONER YAKI: I'll let 14 Commissioner Heriot go first.

15 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Okay.
16 Commissioner Heriot, go ahead.

17 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Oh, okay. I'm not 18 sure where all of this subjective versus objective 19 stuff is coming from in the statute. I'm looking 20 at the Florida statute here and it says, "A person 21 is justified in using or threatening to use force, 22 except deadly force against another -- let me get 23 to the point -- "to the extent the person 24 reasonably believes that such conduct is necessary 25 to defend himself or herself."

1

81

2

Where's the part about subjective? Can you direct me to that?

4

5

MR. DAVID LABAHN: Sure. It is -- it is -- that is a subjective standard, that it's the -- 6

7

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Reasonableness is a subjective standard?

8

9 10 11

MR. DAVID LABAHN: It's a --

COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Let's not talk over one another, please, everybody. Let the witness speak.

12

13

14

MR. DAVID LABAHN: And -- that's what the courts have inferred. This is -- that the person reasonably believes --

15

16

17

18

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: That's nonsense.

MR. DAVID LABAHN: -- that is a subjective standard not an objective standard.
The Beard Case was talked about earlier -- 19 20 21

22

23

COMMISSIONER HERIOT: In what universe is that -- that a subjective standard? I mean, that's nutty, it's got to be reasonable. How do you determine reasonableness -- it's always with reference to what a reasonable person would do.

25

MR. DAVID LABAHN: No, no, no, it's not a reasonable person standard. It is a person's --

2 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: I beg to differ --

3 MR. DAVID LABAHN: -- there is -- very 4 significant difference between a person who 5 reasonably believes and a reasonable person 6 believes. And the statute is what the person 7 believes, not what a reasonable person is. I will 8 quote you the language out of Beard so you can see 9 the difference. The Beard --

10 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: I'm a torts
11 professor. You know, this is what I do for a 12 living, is I talk about what's the reasonable 13 person standard. You know, you're talking to the 14 wrong person. And if you think this is going to 15 be a question of --

16 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: -- could you just 17 let him respond.

18 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: Clearly not.

19 UNKNOWN PHONE SPEAKER: Let him answer
20 the question.

21 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. LaBahn, go
22 ahead.

23 MR. DAVID LABAHN: I -- I -- I don't 24 know if I can come back, because when it is a 25 reasonable person standard it says reasonable

2 person. It doesn't say person who reasonably 3 believes. It's been very clear. There hasn't 4 been any question. You can look at the 5 Zimmerman --

6 COMMISSIONER HERIOT: There is now.

7 MR. DAVID LABAHN: -- yeah, you can look 8 at the Zimmerman case, this was intended to be and 9 is, a subjective standard not an objective 10 standard. If it was an objective standard you 11 would not have the prosecutors -- have so much 12 difficulty with it. And if this panel comes back 13 and says "objective standard is preferred," that 14 would be a great assist.

15 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Commissioner Yaki
16 and then Commissioner Narasaki.

17 COMMISSIONER YAKI: Yeah, I'm a little 18 troubled by -- I was even troubled by Mr. Roman's 19 criticism of the Tampa Bay -- and by the way, it's 20 the Tampa Bay Times not the Tribune, I think that 21 they would be upset that their -- that they were 22 part of a different news organization.

23 The data that they have is actually data 24 that I find very useful because it goes into a lot 25 of subsets and hard data, charging sheets,

2 et cetera that I think are not necessarily those 3 that are reported as part of the normal databases 4 that are collected by the federal government.

5 In fact it's one where I believe that we 6 have the ability to go even further and use that 7 kind of model for research in terms of other 8 jurisdictions as well.

9 I think it's important to put that in 10 there because one of my issues with regard to 11 trying to take the notion of implicit bias and 12 simply apply it at one part of the stage, is that 13 when you look at how the stand your ground statute 14 is formulated implicit bias can be there at any 15 particular stage. It can be at the moment that a 16 person decides that someone is a threat to them.
17 It can be there the moment when the investigating 18 officer upon hearing the persons assertion of 19 stand your ground, makes a decision right then and 20 there, "Well, it was a -- it was a -- "This person 21 talking to me is white, the person attacking was 22 black," not that he's a racist, but there could be 23 right then and there a decision, "Okay, I'm going 24 to let this person go and worry -- and then decide 25 later on whether or not there's probable cause."

2 And going to the point where the judge makes a 3 decision at an immunity hearing. It can be at any 4 different locale, and I think that's why we need 5 to look at the data in all sorts of areas to 6 determine whether or not there is that kind of 7 thing there. But that's just a statement about 8 that.

9 My question was actually for -- for 10 Ms. Burke. And it goes to -- could -- should we 11 -- would we even be talking about the impact of 12 stand your ground if it were not for the 13 correlation between stand your ground laws and the 14 status of gun laws in the states in which it 15 exists?

16 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Right -- I mean, 17 stand your ground -- stand your ground clearly has 18 grown up around a time when the gun laws are 19 becoming more lax. Guns are becoming more 20 available. There's no longer -- for a person to 21 carry a concealed weapon. There's no longer a 22 necessity to show that you have fear. That you 23 need that be armed on a public street.

24 It used to be if you needed a concealed 25 weapon that you could apply for a permit. That

2 you would go to your sheriff, your police officer, 3 they would know you from the community, and they 4 would make a determination of high moral character 5 of a non-dangerous personality, and the fact that 6 you needed a gun, perhaps you were being stalked, 7 perhaps you worked in a very dangerous 8 neighborhood and moved cash at night. There was 9 all sorts of reasons that a reasonable society 10 would say "this person needs to be armed for their 11 self-defense." And that situation was working 12 very well.

13 But, at the behest of the gun lobby
14 those laws have been relaxed in a historic sweep 15 throughout our country. And at this point there 16 is really no telling how many people walk around 17 now with concealed weapons on them at all times.

18 And implicit bias then becomes a deadly 19 bias, I think, because suddenly a fear that maybe 20 would have made you uncomfortable and scared and 21 you'd get in your car and leave, now people are 22 holstered up and they feel the right to if anybody 23 disrespects them to, you know, shoot them.

24 And the issue of civil liability and the 25 fact that this law protects people from negligent

2 shooting is another travesty because, you know, I 3 thought it was a very interesting discussion with 4 the prior panel about the 15 year old in the car 5 behind the thugs who was shot and killed and had 6 no recourse -- her family had no recourse to bring 7 a suit against anyone.

8 One of the panelist's said, "Well, 9 that's how it should be. You know, someone acting 10 in self-defense isn't going to have insurance for 11 that." But, in fact, we see concealed carry 12 insurance as a new product. You carry your gun 13 with you everywhere, so the websites say, you 14 know, you're more likely to be involved in an 15 incident and need legal representation. So for 16 $14 a month now you can have insurance against 17 just exactly that kind of shooting, right, of 18 spraying a crowd and then saying, "Gosh, I was 19 terrified."

20 So, in answer to your question, I think 21 you'd have to see them arm in arm.

22 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Mr. Lott and then
23 Commissioner Narasaki.

24 MR. JOHN LOTT: Yeah, thanks. Just as a 25 response to Miss Burke. We have data

2 cross-states. We have data in terms of the 3 different rules, the types of rules that she's 4 looking at. Let's them look to see what revocation 5 rates differ. And in fact there's no
6 statistically significant difference in terms of 7 revocation rates for the states that have the 8 types of rules that she's having or the states 9 that are more liberal.

10 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: Mr. Lott -- I
11 mean, Mr. Zimmerman's gun has not been revoked.
12 His license has not been revoked so I would 13 question the viability and the inappropriateness 14 of the revocation laws.

15 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: And I've got to 16 believe that the revocation procedures, processes 17 and resources vary state by state, so they may not 18 even have folks who are regularly investigating in 19 some of these states as revocations. So I don't 20 know how that can be a distinction point, but -- 21 Commissioner Narasaki.

22 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Yes, thank you.
23 I actually find it that it doesn't necessarily 24 prove that the system is working if there aren't 25 any revocations. I actually believe that proves

2 that perhaps it's not working. It's like when my 3 90 year old grandmother in California got her 4 drivers license renewed without an exam. That 5 did not make me feel any better about the driver's 6 in California and getting on the road.

7 So I have a question about -- well, 8 first, on the issue of reasonable amount versus 9 reasonable belief. You know, Professor Cynthia 10 Lee's written a book about the extent to which a 11 reasonable man-standard still has some 12 subjectivity, right? Depending on what group is 13 deciding what a reasonable man would do. But, it 14 has more objectivity than saying, "Well, putting 15 myself in the position of someone who's an older 16 white man, not used to being around minorities, 17 feeling threatened and disrespected, I might say, 18 you know, I wouldn't feel threatened, but I could 19 see that that guy might reasonably feel 20 threatened. That to me is a very different 21 standard, and in fact rewards people for being 22 biased, and I'm concerned about that. I don't 23 think that's something that should be rewarded.

24 What I am interested in understanding is 25 that, in the issue of implicit bias, it's not just

2 how the justice system treats you, but it's also 3 the question of when are you going to get shot.
4 Right? And that's the irrevocable fact that in a 5 split second your bias allows you to shoot someone 6 and then the legal system either treats that -- 7 treats everybody fairly or not fairly after what 8 happened. So I think that's maybe where we're 9 sort of parting ways, Mr. Lott.

10 I do want to know though, do you believe 11 that there's implicit bias? Do you believe that 12 there's bias in the system that would cause you 13 any kind of concern, if in fact implicit bias 14 exists? Or is it just that you're trying to argue 15 that the data doesn't prove that in fact it's 16 resulted in any inequity?

17 MR. JOHN LOTT: I'm happy to accept that 18 there's surely biases that people have in many 19 different ways. I'm just saying in this 20 particular case we have a very useful data set 21 that we can go and look at to see whether it 22 effects the final outcome.

23 I want to talk for a minute in terms of 24 your example with your grandmother getting the 25 driver's license. What we would do then is we would look to see what happens to accidents, we 3

1

91

2

could look at accident rates for people who are 75 4 to 80. Okay? We can do the exact same thing -- 5

COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Her 85 year old 6 sister ran into a police and she did not get her 7 license revoked either.

8

MR. JOHN LOTT: No -- but, even if you don't look at revocations, you can look at things

9

10 like murders. You can look at accidents. You can 11 look at what happens in murder rates or accidents

12 in other states based upon the types of rules.

13

And in fact what you find is that the 14 states that have easier rules for getting permits

15 actually have bigger drops in murder rates because 16 you have more people being issued permits.

17

And so it's the exact opposite -- if you 18

-- the ultimate thing that you care about then 19 when you were talking about what happens with 20 stand your ground laws somebody gets shot -- well, 21

let's look to see what happens to all murders.

22

When you look at that and you control for the gun 23 control laws that Miss Burke says needs to be 24 accounted for there -- you see drops there in 25 murder rates -- you have fewer lives lost. And I

2 agree that's a very important bottom line.

3 So it's not just looking at revocations, 4 I agree revocations are just one possible way of 5 looking at it, but you need to look at other 6 factors and I look at all of those different 7 things.

8 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: Can I just ask 9 you for a clarification on that because we have 10 thousands of pages that the great commission staff 11 have pulled together for us to prepare for this 12 hearing, and I really want to thank the staff for 13 the incredible job that they've done so far, but 14 in my reading I recall repeatedly seeing that in 15 fact in stand your ground places murder went up, 16 am I wrong? Am I confused?

17 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: No, you're right.

18 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: So I'm confused
19 by what you're arguing.

20 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: I'm sorry,
21 Miss Burke did you want to respond?

22 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: -- 8 percent --

23 MR. JOHN LOTT: Well, can't I just 24 respond --

25 MS. ELIZABETH BURKE: -- I think it was 1

93

2 the --

3 MR. JOHN LOTT: The Texas A & M study.
4 And what I tried to do -- oops, there it is. What 5 I tried to do was just go through and tried to 6 explain to you kind of what happened with the 7 Texas A & M study -- there's also a Georgia study, 8 but both of them are very similar.

9 Texas A & M really looked at only laws 10 between 2005 and 2010, no explanation for why they 11 didn't look at other periods. A very narrow 12 window in terms of crimes -- rates that they 13 looked at. They didn't control for any other 14 types of laws that Mrs. Burke -- Miss Burke was 15 just making argument needed to be accounted for 16 because it would affect the rate and the possible 17 problems that would occur. There's -- it's really 18 amazing cherry picking that goes on --

19 COMMISSIONER NARASAKI: But -- but, 20 homicides either went up or down.

21 MR. JOHN LOTT: No, but -- the point is 22 -- let me give you an example. They not only look 23 at stand your ground laws, it's been a misnomer 24 they also look -- have in there Castle Doctrine 25 states. So someplace like Illinois for example,

2 say that, let's get away from Mr. Roman's data and 3 let's go back to Mr. Krouse from the Congressional 4 Research Service and his slides which showed that 5 -- that overall there's been an uptick in the 6 homicide rates starting around 2005. And then -- 7 and that certainly beginning in 2005 there's a 8 very big uptick in terms of justifiable homicides.
9 And now -- I just want to say this one thing which 10 is, what Mr. Lott said actually kind of goes to 11 the point that I was trying to make with 12 Miss Burke which is, you can -- you can -- and, 13 you know, people say -- I noticed that Mr. Shapiro 14 liked it -- liked to say that, "Then Senator 15 Barack Obama voted to expand the Castle Doctrine 16 in Illinois." But then again Illinois has very 17 tough gun laws. But we're talking about, when we 18 look at some of the states where you have not so 19 tough gun laws, where you have the Florida models 20 stand your ground law, and you have the data -- 21 the data that Mr. Roman and others have, and the 22 Tampa Bay Times have, that's where we have -- 23 that's where we see the disparity. That's sort of 24 the -- that's sort of the cocktail that I'm 25 concerned about. That is -- that is, quite

8 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you. We 9 have now reached the appointed time to conclude 10 this brief -- did you want to say something very 11 quickly?

12 MR. DAVID LABAHN: May I just --

13 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Yeah, go ahead,
14 you'll have the last word then I'll close.

15 MR. DAVID LABAHN: Well, thank you,
16 Mr. Chair.

17 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Sure.

18 MR. DAVID LABAHN: I wanted to address 19 the implicit bias question because it's too bad 20 that Mr. Sullivan was unable to attend.

21 He is Special Counsel to the Brooklyn 22 District Attorney. One of the things that he is 23 doing with the Brooklyn D.A.'s Office is training 24 all of the prosecutors on implicit bias.

25 We have done that. On behalf of APA, at 2 one of our national conferences we've trained on 3 that. On behalf of APA we've been involved in two 4 now, racial justice summits of -- especially 5 within our role of prosecutors within the system, 6 how can we make sure that we're doing no harm.

7 So I wanted to directly address and say, 8 that on behalf of prosecutors we recognize 9 implicit bias exists, it's how can we counteract 10 it, and make sure that certain other things are 11 fair. So thank you, sir.

12 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: Thank you. And 13 thanks to each of you and to all of the panelists 14 today. This information is going to be very 15 helpful to us as we prepare our report.

16 I also want to acknowledge and ask all 17 of our staff that are here and especially the 18 staff that have been involved in putting this 19 together over the last several months to please 20 stand and be acknowledged, we really appreciate 21 your work.

22 (Applause.)

23 COMMISSIONER CASTRO: This could not 24 have happened without all of you and we really do 25 appreciate that.
