

Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services

March 2002—Updated

This report of the Delaware Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights was prepared for the information and consideration of the Commission. The content of this report should not be attributed to the Commission, but only to the Advisory Committee.

The United States Commission on Civil Rights

The United States Commission on Civil Rights, first created by the Civil Rights Act of 1957, and reestablished by the United States Commission on Civil Rights Act of 1983, is an independent, bipartisan agency of the Federal Government. By the terms of the 1983 act, as amended by the Civil Rights Commission Amendments Act of 1994, the Commission is charged with the following duties pertaining to discrimination or denials of the equal protection of the laws based on race, color, religion, sex, age, disability, or national origin, or in the administration of justice: investigation of individual discriminatory denials of the right to vote; study and collection of information relating to discrimination or denials of the equal protection of the law; appraisal of the laws and policies of the United States with respect to discrimination or denials of equal protection of the law; investigation of patterns or practices of fraud or discrimination in the conduct of Federal elections; and preparation and issuance of public service announcements and advertising campaigns to discourage discrimination or denials of equal protection of the law. The Commission is also required to submit reports to the President and the Congress at such times as the Commission, the Congress, or the President shall deem desirable.

The State Advisory Committees

An Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights has been established in each of the 50 states and the District of Columbia pursuant to section 105(c) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 and section 3(d) of the Civil Rights Commission Amendments Act of 1994. The Advisory Committees are made up of responsible persons who serve without compensation. Their functions under their mandate from the Commission are to: advise the Commission of all relevant information concerning their respective states on matters within the jurisdiction of the Commission; advise the Commission on matters of mutual concern in the preparation of reports of the Commission to the President and the Congress; receive reports, suggestions, and recommendations from individuals, public and private organizations, and public officials upon matters pertinent to inquiries conducted by the State Advisory Committee; initiate and forward advice and recommendations to the Commission upon matters in which the Commission shall request assistance of the State Advisory Committee; and attend, as observers, any open hearing or conference that the Commission may hold within the state.

Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services

Letter of Transmittal

Delaware Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights

Les Jin, Staff Director

The Delaware Advisory Committee is pleased to submit the first of its kind compilation, The Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services. This Citizens Guide responds to the longstanding need that Delawareans with civil rights and related problems face. For the first time in Delaware, the Citizens Guide brings information into a single source about organizations and agencies whose missions cover persons protected under civil rights laws. It includes more than typical advocacy and enforcement agencies. For example, the Citizens Guide lists the Vietnam Veterans of America, which assists persons with disabilities. By including nonprofit organizations not thought to be civil rights advocates, the Citizens Guide provides more comprehensive assistance to affected persons. Although the Citizens Guide differs from the Committee's previous topical reports, the Committee believes that it will provide immediate assistance to those Delawareans with civil rights and related problems. And the Committee also has reason to hope that the Citizens Guide will serve as a strategic catalyst to galvanize and strengthen the civil rights community in Delaware.

The Committee views this first edition of the Citizens Guide as a work in process—a mere starting point of a long-term endeavor, requiring periodic expansion and update. From the beginning of this project, the Committee hoped that a credible community-oriented nonprofit organization or the civil rights community would undertake future editions as its own enterprise. The Committee is gratified to report that such interest in Wilmington's civil rights community is developing. The Committee feels rewarded by the prospect that its Citizens Guide may help Delawareans well into the future to avail themselves of our state's many civil rights and supporting resources.

Sincerely,

James E. Newton, Chairperson

Acknowledgments

The Committee gratefully acknowledges the contribution of Dr. James E. Newton, who as Committee chairperson provided a leadership role in developing the project proposal. The Committee also acknowledges the invaluable assistance of Project Subcommittee Chairperson Antoine Allen, whose contributions were essential during data collection and verification. The Committee also thanks the Metropolitan Wilmington Urban League, YWCA of Wilmington, and the Delaware Association of Nonprofit Agencies for their parts in data collection.

The Committee wishes to thank the Eastern Regional Office staff for preparation of this report. The project was the chief responsibility of Edward Darden, civil rights analyst, whose contributions included information gathering, computer data processing, and layout design. T. Furaha Raufu Bey provided clerical support, Robert Anthony provided technical assistance with computer software applications, and Dorothy Pearson-Canty provided duplication services. Dawn Sweet was responsible for final processing and editorial review at headquarters. The project was carried out under the overall supervision of Ki-Taek Chun, director of the Eastern Regional Office, who also provided writing and editorial assistance.

Introduction

In 1998 the Delaware Advisory Committee discussed new project ideas. During the discussion, a Committee member recalled an evening that had left a strong impression. The Wilmington YWCA in 1997 held a series of local meetings as part of its yearlong Fight Against Racism. At one meeting in Wilmington, observers (including this Committee member) were surprised to discover that many Delawareans simply did not have access to information that would lead them to civil rights agencies and supporting services. As the Committee considered this observation, it became increasingly clear that using its resources to help the public close that information gap would be as important as, or in a strategic sense more critical than, tackling specific civil rights issues.<sup>1</sup> The Committee decided that a reference guide was needed, and the Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services is the result.

The Committee planned Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services with all Delawareans in mind. The Citizens Guide goes beyond traditional civil rights groups and includes a wide variety of nonprofit organizations. Together, these agencies serve all those persons covered by civil rights laws. For example, the Vietnam Veterans of America is listed because it gives significant support to persons with disabilities. In this way, the Citizens Guide serves public needs by putting affected persons in touch with civil rights organizations, government agencies, and nonprofit organizations that can help with their specific problems. This guide compiles categories of organizations into 25 chapters. Eighteen chapters are categorized by civil rights issue, such as employment, housing, and law enforcement. Of the seven remaining chapters, three chapters cover Delaware's three counties and four chapters have titles covering federal and state agencies, which include major departmental and independent government agencies with the mission of protecting civil rights, as well as contact information for Delaware's U.S. senators and U.S. representative.

The table of contents cross-references organizations that appear in more than one chapter. For those appearing more than once, only the first listing has full text and later ones refer back to the first full text entry.

The Citizens Guide opens with two introductory essays. The first one by Chairperson Dr. James E. Newton, professor of Black American Studies at the University of Delaware, is titled "We Shall Overcome: An Overview of the Civil Rights Movement in Delaware." And the second one by chairperson of the project subcommittee, Dr. Antoine Allen, who is also president and CEO of the Metropolitan Wilmington Urban League (MWUL), is titled "Within Our Grasp." Newton's essay casts a historical eye on minority rights from

<sup>1</sup> State officials and advocates had already briefed the Committee. For example, representatives of the state attorney general and the Division of Human Relations had outlined the state's civil rights enforcement efforts, including school desegregation. The state's director of juvenile justice provided detailed information on race as a factor in statistical disparities for African American and Hispanic youth in the criminal justice system. Also, the state's Americans with Disabilities Act implementation coordinator described the state's compliance efforts. Thus, the Committee had three project topics under discussion:

1. Education—The legacy and continuing impact of school busing to achieve racial desegregation in Wilmington and New Castle Co.
2. Administration of Justice—Reasons underlying the sharp growth of prison inmate populations in state facilities, particularly the overrepresentation of African Americans among death row inmates.
3. Disability—The barriers facing people with disabilities in achieving equal protection and recognition of their concerns among traditional civil rights enforcement efforts.

their Civil War genesis in the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments to the Constitution, while Allen's sees hope for the future. The two essays form complementary views on Delaware's civil rights movement both past and prospective.

The Committee encourages every stakeholder in Delaware's civil rights and civic communities to consider this first edition of the Delaware Citizens Guide to Civil Rights and Supporting Services as a work in progress and build upon it. Although there are many persons to thank on behalf of the Committee, special recognition goes to Project Subcommittee Chairperson Allen and MWUL Chairperson James H. Gilliam Sr. for their assistance. The Committee also thanks the many agencies and offices that provided information and particularly the Delaware Association of Nonprofit Agencies, whose membership directory was an invaluable resource.

Essay 1

"We Shall Overcome: An Overview of the Civil Rights Movement in Delaware"

BY DR. JAMES E. NEWTON
Chairperson, Delaware Advisory Committee
Professor of Black American Studies, University of Delaware

*We shall overcome, we shall overcome
We shall overcome some day,
Oh, deep in my heart I do believe
We shall overcome some day*

—A Civil Rights Movement Song

The civil rights movement in America, symbolized by its theme song "We Shall Overcome," is one of the foremost dramas of all times. In the struggle to overcome years of discrimination and segregation, tens of thousands of African Americans and their supporters—through court decisions, boycotts, sit-ins, and protest marches—demonstrated individual and collective courage by standing up against a historic legacy of discrimination and demanding their constitutional rights as full-fledged American citizens to legal equality and justice.

The African American quest for freedom and equality began in 1619 when the first slaves arrived in America in chains. For nearly 250 years the debate over the institution of slavery would continue, becoming more intense and bitter over time. Only a civil war could resolve sectional differences over the practice of slavery. With the passage by Congress of the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, black Americans received legal acknowledgment of their freedom, civil rights, and the right to vote.

Despite this seeming victory, African Americans soon found that they had not gained the full rights of citizenship. Their newly won freedom proved short lived. In the 1870s state legislatures began to pass Jim Crow laws that mandated racial segregation in most aspects of American life. Separate drinking fountains and seating sections in public transportation, racially segregated schools and public accommodations, and different churches reflected discrete black and white societies. In 1896 the United States Supreme Court upheld the legality of segregation.

The black struggle for freedom and equality under the law—the full rights of citizenship—had yet to be won. Out of this struggle came the modern civil rights movement. Although the civil rights movement is most associated in the public's mind with developments in the South, states throughout the nation, including Delaware, were a part of the movement. As a border state, Delaware's race relations consisted of a mixture of Southern and Northern customs. Sussex County remained a stronghold for slaveholding, while New Castle County became a refuge for Quaker-aided Northern-bound slaves on the Underground Railroad.

In general, the white majority in Delaware demonstrated little support for full rights of citizenship for blacks. Freedom for slaves in Delaware came not from the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 but through the adoption of the 13th Amendment to the United States Constitution. Thus, Delaware was first in line for ratification of the Constitution and last, along with Kentucky, when it came to abolishing slavery.

Following the Civil War, Delaware legislators opposed giving newly emancipated slaves any political or civil rights. Fearful that the Civil Rights Act passed by Congress in 1875 might establish social equality, Delaware legislators passed a Jim Crow law (1875), which virtually made black Delawareans second-class citizens. The law was not repealed until 1963.

Another important episode in Delaware's role in civil rights is the case of William Neal. In 1880 Anthony Higgins, U.S. senator from Delaware, defended William Neal, a black man falsely accused of rape. In the first trial Neal was found guilty, but Higgins successfully appealed the case to the United States Supreme Court on the basis that Neal was denied a trial by his peers. Although no black was selected for the jury, Neal was acquitted, establishing a precedent for blacks to serve as jurors.

The 20th century found black Delawareans involved in a continual struggle for political and economic opportunities. The Wilmington branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, organized in 1912, as well as black churches, were the major advocates for blacks in the state.

The First State also figured prominently in the desegregation of higher education (University of Delaware, 1950), and subsequently Delaware provided one of the four legal cases (Belton v. Gebhart) joined together as part of the United States Supreme Court's landmark decision on school desegregation (Brown v. Board of Education, 1952).

A third example of the judicial struggle for civil rights in Delaware came in 1961 when Wilmington City Councilman William "Dutch" Burton was denied service in the Eagle Restaurant. He sued and in 1961 the case ended up in the Supreme Court, which ruled that racial bias in restaurants was forbidden. Two years later the Delaware General Assembly passed a public accommodations bill.

Much like their counterparts in other states, black Delawareans fought for better housing, equal employment, and educational opportunities. They listened to and marched with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Malcolm X, supported the NAACP, promoted black pride, and sought to overcome the obstacles of discrimination. While they recognized the First State's progress in race relations, black Delawareans remained acutely aware of the continuous need for social, economic, and educational adjustments to improve the quality of life for members of their group.

The citizens of the First State have, over the years, long been involved on both sides of the fence in matters dealing with civil rights. In the near and distant future it appears that Delawareans will be more aware of the rights of their fellow citizens in the area of civil rights. And they will look for assistance from a host of organizations to ensure that equity and fairness are provided to all citizens regardless of race, color, creed, sexual orientation, or disability.

While the First State appeared reluctant to provide the same rights to all, individual and group efforts many times forced the issue and thus made the state comply with the wishes of its citizens. In more recent years the face of Delaware is changing—women and blacks are in governance at a variety of levels, the landscape has yielded to those who are disabled, diversity has gained entrance into Delaware-based corporations, and new challenges are forthcoming in the arena of educational opportunities. Delaware, the state that started the nation, is now poised to eliminate all obstacles to equal justice and equality.

The civil rights movement affected all Americans—rich and poor, young and old, male and female, those with disabilities, and people of all races, colors, and creeds. Since the Civil Rights Act of 1964 many young Americans have grown up in desegregated schools and integrated neighborhoods with a feeling that they will "live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." There is no doubt that the civil rights movement has had an enormous impact on present-day America, bringing complex issues of freedom and individual justice to the public's attention, molding public opinion, and challenging American values and attitudes. Dramatic social and political changes have taken place, along with increased dialogue on race relations.

For more than three centuries African Americans have been steadfast and consistent in their rejection of efforts to misrepresent their role in world civilization and to deny them access to first-class citizenship. By both embracing and promoting the idea of America as a cultural democracy, blacks and their supporters have participated in the country's continual growth and development. J. Saunders Redding (1906–1988), distinguished black Delawarean and author of They Came in Chains, describes African Americans as a powerful "catalyst of American democracy." America's modern civil rights struggle for equality and justice is one of its greatest challenges. The measure of this challenge is true equality—when all Americans have equity and respect in the eyes of their fellow citizens.

Essay 2

"Within Our Grasp"

BY DR. ANTOINE ALLEN

Chairperson of the Project Subcommittee, Delaware Advisory Committee

The civil rights gains of a generation gone by are not to be forgotten. Too many sacrificed too much, for too long for anyone to discount the impact of those who endured racial and gender discrimination in the last century—and for hundreds of years before. The recognition of these phenomena is generally accepted as valid; however, the explanations as to their origins vary.

While most would agree that a history of unequal treatment has promoted gender and racial disparities in education, employment, income, housing, and other socioeconomic indicators, the persistence of such disparities is often seen as a result of the lack of initiative or skill on the part of the non-powerful. To the extent that public policy, particularly that of the late 1960s and 1970s, has attempted to respond to the effects of longstanding discriminatory practices, the debate over how best to ensure "fair and equal" treatment for everyone has ensued.

In large part, the rewards of such long suffering lie with the children and grandchildren of all our ancestors. While it is still not common enough to see people of color and women in ultimate positions of authority and responsibility, there are noticeable signs of advancement in virtually all professional categories and within each corresponding socioeconomic level. Indeed, cries of victory abound.

Whether it is the rise of the black middle class or the impact of "soccer moms" in presidential elections, the masses believe that true equality for all people is clearly within our grasp. I cannot deny such an assertion. I am a direct product of the powerful public policy and freedoms won even before I was born.

Yet, this knowledge alone makes the work of the Delaware Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and the Metropolitan Wilmington Urban League as relevant today as ever. Simply put, without vigilance, any freedom or civil right won can be lost. This is particularly true in a time of economic prosperity where the overarching mantra contends that opportunity is so prevalent that to be unsuccessful must be a matter of personal deficiency. If taken as true, there is no answer to deplorable urban conditions among people of color, wage inequities between women and their male counterparts, or insufficient bilingual education opportunities.

We have to believe that the least advantaged among us have the potential to be great. This indicator alone will determine Delaware's and our nation's future success. We should all heed this call and join the 21st century civil rights movement, a movement where no one person—regardless of circumstance or environment—is left behind. This directory is just a symbol of a larger, important and continuing purpose. We should hold fast to the notion that the best of our quest and of our citizenship is yet to be.

Focus: Housing

Mission: Habitat for Humanity of New Castle County builds affordable housing at no profit through a combination of volunteer labor, "sweat equity," and no-interest mortgages. We act in partnership with the local community as a diverse group, including concerned individuals, partner families, faith groups, civic organizations, and businesses. We reach out from Christian roots across denominational, faith, economic, and racial lines to bring together people who are concerned for their neighbors. We strive to develop and empower individuals and communities through the construction of simple, decent homes. We give working poor families a chance to become first-time homebuyers. Selected homemakers partner with Habitat by working 350 hours of sweat equity on their home and at other Habitat projects. They buy the home at cost with a no-interest loan.

Hours: Mon-Fri 8:30am-5pm, Sat 9am-3pm

Fees: None

Requirements: Need for decent housing, ability to repay mortgage, willingness to partner with Habitat

Ages Served: All

Gender: Both
