COMMISSION ACTIVITY

May

On May 9, the Commission held a public briefing, Federal Me Too: Examining Sexual Harassment in Government Workplaces, to examine the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission’s enforcement efforts to combat workplace sexual harassment across the federal government, including the frequency of such claims and findings of harassment, the resources dedicated to preventing and redressing harassment, and the impact and efficacy of these enforcement efforts. The briefing looked at agency-level practices to address sexual harassment at the Department of State and NASA. Commissioners heard from current and former officials, academic and legal experts, advocates, and individuals who have experienced harassment. We invite you to watch the briefing’s morning, afternoon, and public comment sessions; read panelists’ written testimony; and view the agenda and transcript.

The Commission’s 2015 report, With Liberty and Justice for All: The State of Civil Rights at Immigration Detention Facilities, addressed the status of detained undocumented immigration children. In July 2018, the Commission voted to reopen its investigation on the conditions of immigration detention, and appointed a Subcommittee to examine the issue further. You can read the business meeting transcript here.

June

On June 13, the Commission released our report, Collateral Consequences: The Crossroads of Punishment, Redemption, and the Effects on Communities. The report addresses the potentially thousands of negative collateral consequences facing the over 600,000 individuals released each year from federal and state prisons. On issuance of the report, Chair Lhamon said, “These collateral consequences impose heavy burdens on formerly incarcerated persons’ ability successfully to reintegrate into free society and in so doing render all of us less equal and less safe. Congress, and local communities, should heed the call documented in these pages to lift unnecessary restrictions and speed effective reentry for formerly incarcerated people.” Please also see our press release.

On June 5, Chair Lhamon and Commissioner Karen Narasaki participated in a Congressional panel discussion – hosted by U.S. Representative Derek Kilmer - on our report, Broken Promises: Continuing Federal Funding Shortfall for Native Americans, issued in December of last year. We invite you to view the discussion here.

July

On July 23, the Commission released our report, Beyond Suspensions: Examining School Discipline Policies and Connections to the School-to-Prison Pipeline for Students of Color with Disabilities. On issuance of the report, Chair Lhamon stated: “As the Commission documents, discrimination based on race and disability in school discipline practices has plagued education across the United States for decades and can wreak significant harm on students and school communities. As the Commission urges, the nations’ students deserve aggressive enforcement of federal civil rights laws designed to protect against these harms.” You can read our press release here.

We look forward to working with members of Congress to ensure that the Commission’s recommendations are adopted.”

At our August 22 telephonic business meeting the Commission majority voted to approve a forthcoming report: In the Name of Hate: Examining the Federal Government's Role in Responding to Hate Crimes. The Commission held a public briefing on the subject in May 2018.

DID YOU KNOW?

In October 1977, the Commission held a two-day public briefing in Seattle to address civil rights concerns of Native Americans in the state of Washington. The Commission took up the topic as a result of two decades of tensions among state government, legislators, business, private interests (for example, the fishing industry), and Native American peoples after federal policy continued to push “assimilation” and “termination” of Native American reservations. An excellent resource describing the hearing and the issues it attempted to address can be found here.

Last December, the Commission issued a major report, Broken Promises: Continued Federal Funding Shortfall for Native Americans, evidencing the need for our continued attention to the critical civil rights challenges Native Americans face to this day.
